SECRET SERVICE PLOT TO DEPORT THAW

LIND TO RETURN TO MEXICO

Instructions Sent to Wilson's Special Envoy, After "Optimistic" Advices.

AMERICANS ARE LEAVING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—John Lind, special envoy from President Wilson in Mexico was today ordered to return to Mexico City from Vera Cruz.

The order for the return of Lind followed the receipt here of a very optimistic message from Mr. Lind in Vera Cruz. It is possible, unless the present program miscarries, that there will be a full discussion in the Mexican capital tomorrow night or Saturday, relative to the chief points at issue betwin the United States and Mexico, the principal one of which is the elimination of Huerta.

Many leading corporations with properties in Mexico have already wired for all their American employes to leave for the United States.

Huerta Asks for More Time.

President Huerta today made concessions in his stand against the American mediation plan. Envoy Lind cabled that the de facto President had withdrawn his request, made in the original vote regarding the Wilson proposals of an exchange of ambassadors, and in effect had requested that the entire situation be allowed to remain in statu quo

Gardner Sends Bird $500 in Challenge

Congressman A. P. Gardner today sent Candidate Bird of the Progressive party a check for $500, which Mr. Bird is to turn over to charity if he can name a single person in Washington, outside Mr. Gardner's secretaries, with whom Mr. Gardner consulted before entering the gubernatorial fight.

Mr. Gardner calls upon Mr. Bird to make good his charge that Gardner was sent from Washington to make the fight, and declares the only persons who urged him to run were John H. Coggswell of Lynn, Mrs. Gardner, and W. W. Lufkin, his secretary.

Mrs. McCoy is injured internally, Mrs. Butler sustained a broken arm, while Mr. McCoy has severe contusions on the head.

Petition Copper Co. in Bankruptcy

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today in the Federal building against the Butte Central Copper Company at the instance of William H. Gardner of Somerville, Augustus P. Arnold of Boston and Raymond Tift of Somerville, with aggregate claims of $1,000. They claim the alleged bankrupt company made preference of creditors in the payment of money. Austin M. Pinkham of No. 27 State street is named for the men.

Endorse Blaine for Hull Supervisor

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. Endorsement of the candidacy of John F. Blaine, local inspector of hulls at Boston, for appointment as supervising inspector has been filed with the Department of Commerce by Alfred Gallano, president of the American Merchant Marine Association of Boston. Congressman Curry has indorsed James T. Cowan, financial secretary of the Tammany Club for the same vacancy.

Rear-Admiral Robert M. Doyle, Commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, was today the guest of Commandant DeWitt at the Charlestown Navy Yard. The new torpedo boat Destroyer Duncan will be delivered at the Charlestown Navy Yard tomorrow, where she will be fitted and made ready for sea. The destroyer was built at the Fore River ship yard.

Insurgents Again Lose on Glass Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The insurgents again went down to defeat in the Democratic caucus today. By a vote of 27 to 96 the caucus declined to accept Representative Henry's substitute for the bond refunding section of the currency bill. Henry's amendment would have retired all the present bank notes and green back paper circulation.

WORLD'S BIGGEST SHIP AFIRE

Imperator Badly Damaged by Flames as She Lies at Hoboken Pier.

ONE DEATH; $75,000 LOSS

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Hamburg American liner Imperator, the biggest passenger-carrying ship afloat, which arrived in port last night with 3,100 passengers on board, was swept by fire today as she lay at her pier in Hoboken, N. J.

Second Officer Herman Gerbracht lost his life while trying to close the fire doors and confine the flames to the fifth deck or provision room.

It was reported that two seamen had been burned to death and for a long time they were missing, but subsequently were found.

After the fire was out it was found that the damage was not nearly so extensive as first estimated. The actual loss from fire was placed at from $50,000 to $75,000. In addition much damage was done by water to furniture and decorations.

Panic broke out among the 1,200 steerage passengers and many were hurt.

Panic in the Steerage.

The steerage passengers were being held on board the liner over night. It was too late to transfer them to Ellis Island when the ship docked.

While half of the crew of 1,180 fought the spreading blaze, the balance got all the steerage passengers to safety on the pier.

The fire was discovered in the provision room on the ship about 5 o'clock. Fed by the oils and fats of the foodstuffs it spread rapidly and at 7:30 o'clock some expressed fears that the luxurious $7,500,000 liner was doomed.

At that hour the crew was assisted by fire fighters from Hoboken, Jersey City and New York, and Captain Ruser, commander of the planless, said that the loss would be very serious.

Fire Spread Quickly.

The provision room is in the after part of the ship. So swiftly did the blaze eat its way that it cut off communication to the second cabin before the alarm became general. Steerage passengers hearing the cracking of the walls and steps set up a cry of fright which echoed over the entire ship. Smoke rolled upward from the liner, giving the impression on shore that the Hamburg-American pier was on fire. Police reserves were rushed to the scene.

Captain Ruser, chief of the five commanders of the leviathan, was one of the first to reach the provision room. He personally took command and directed

HARRY LAUGHS AT REPORT

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 28.—The Canadian immigration officials took sides in the Thaw fight today, arraying themselves on the side of Jerome, who is trying to drag Harry back to New York.

The officials are angered by Thaw's dilatory tactics and by his determination to keep out of their hands by staying in jail.

A large detail of secret service men—fourteen of them—are here to assist the immigration officers. If Thaw is allowed to leave the jail on any pretext whatever, these men with the immigration inspectors are prepared to seize him, rush him to the border and shove him into United States territory without a moment's delay. This plan was made today, and the secret service men are bitterly determined to carry it out.

"If we once get hold of him," said one of the inspectors today, "no sheriff, no habeas corpus writ or anything else will ever get to him. He'll be in the United States and we'll be rid of a peck of trouble, in the shortest possible order."

Grand Jury May Probe Case.

Another new element entered the case today with the possibility that the Grand Jury be called in special session to consider Thaw's commitment to prison. This commitment is according to experts manifestly illegal, and the Grand Jury here has inquisitorial powers which would enable it to take up the matter.

Such action it is believed, might result in setting Thaw at liberty before the

"I'M GOING TO MY DEATH," WRITES GIRL

The AMERICAN has received the following amazing letter, written in a woman's hand, dated "Allston," but postmarked at the Essex street station:

Allston, Aug. 26, 1913.

Dear Editor:

Please print this in your paper. I have taken a corrosive sublimate tablet, and gone to my death in the Charles River at 12:30 (this word is either Wednesday or Thursday) night. I will jump over the Massachusetts avenue bridge. I have nothing to live for, for I have lost the only one that was dear to me.

He proved a snake and traitor. I have lost my home and the respect of my father on his account. There is nothing left for me but what I am going to do.

I still love him and cannot go on without him. I hope the downfall he has caused will follow him to his grave with my curse.

My dying words will be a curse for him, and I shall haunt him till it takes him.

I will not give you my name, as you will have that when you find my body. I will be missed by two dear girls. That is all. Thank you. Good-by!

Gasolene Explodes, Woman May Die

Mrs. Cushing Badly Burned While Cleaning Clothes at Home.

While cleaning clothes at her home at No. 8 Lexington street, East Boston, this morning, Mrs. Hattie Cushing, thirty-four years old, was probably fatally burned today when a large quantity of gasoline exploded. The fluid went all over her clothes and in a few seconds they were in flames. Screams attracted the attention of neighbors and they rushed to Mrs. Cushing's apartment. She was sent to the East Boston Relief Hospital, where it was found she had suffered severe burns on the legs, back, face and arms. Her name was placed on the dangerous list.

Ex-Mayor Higgins May Be Ousted

Ex-Mayor George C. Higgins of Lynn is in danger of losing his office as secretary of the Lynn Overseers of Poor, according to a statement of Chairman Thomas Moore of the board that has investigated charges against the former Mayor. The charges allege that Higgins allowed a Miss Ella Moore after her death in the almshouse to be buried by popular subscription when the woman's property had been acquired by Higgins at a private sale for nonpayment of taxes. A special committee heard the evidence.

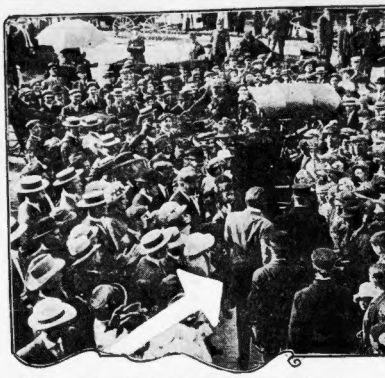
SCENES IN SHERBROOKE WHEN THAW WON GREAT COURT VICTORY



The crowd at the courthouse as Thaw took carriage for ride back to jail. Harry, bareheaded, is seen at guard's side, walking toward carrige.

Thaw as he appeared when his case was called by Judge Globensky yesterday. Thaw's close attention to the developments in court is indicated by his serious attitude.

The four Canadian guards, who were sent from Quebec for special duty in guarding Thaw on his appearance in court yesterday.

THAW NOW WILLING TO WAIT IN JAIL AND LET JEROME MAKE NEXT MOVE

October term of court for which he is waiting.

Thaw was jubilant today, "the happiest man in Canada," as he said himself.

His attorneys wouldn't let him see the reporters, and that was the only fly in his ointment, but he sent out another of his "interviews" written out by himself.

"I don't fear any secret service agents, for my lawyers have told me I am safe," he wrote.

"There is a chance I may decide to have my trial before a jury in October. By that time I know I shall have convinced all good Canadians that I am sane."

The reference to the detectives was prompted by the fact that there are fourteen secret service agents here. They are in evidence about the jail, but no explanation of their presence has been given.

Thaw in another part of his statement said:

"We have no complaint to make. On the contrary, people are very good to us. But we must stop some of the fakes they are printing about Evelyn and me."

Harry was busy all morning grinding out his interview. It is oddly disconnected—as remarkable a document as the first three he has sent out.

Jerome Sees Gouin.

Jerome—the same here as a special deputy from the office of the Attorney-General of New York State, today is in Quebec. He had an audience with Sir Lomar Gouin, Governor of the Province of Quebec, and urged him to order the surrender of Thaw.

The Governor has this power. He can direct Justice DuPuis to quash the ridiculous commitment under which Thaw is held. Thaw would then be released, and with his release the immigration officials would at once step into the case.

Mr. Jerome spared no words in talk with Governor Gouin, but said frankly that the proceedings before Judge Globensky were "farcical."

The block which may hinder Jerome on this task is the fact that Quebec is a Liberal province, and the voters are heartily in favor of helping Thaw in every possible way, so that Governor Gouin, in surrendering Thaw, would be going directly counter to public opinion.

Jerome is more determined than ever to get Thaw.

"The fight has just begun," he declared, "and some way will be found to get possession of this maniac, Thaw. There must be enough law in His Majesty's Dominions to restore him."

Mr. Jerome will demand the cooperation of the Attorney-General of the Province and the Minister of Justice, and if his appeal to these authorities avails the State of New York nothing, he will take the case to the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa. He is determined, after the defeat of his forces in the lower court, to waste no more time over minor judicial proceedings, but will go to the higher authorities at once.

Mr. Jerome betrayed little discouragement after the session before Judge Globensky. He declared:

"It might appear that the decision of the court was a severe setback for the State of New York, but I do not so regard it. This is a Dominion matter and it cannot be disposed of by a Provincial court. Eventually this case of Harry Thaw must be decided by the Federal government at Ottawa. We can rest assured that the Federal government will act."

Jerome was asked when he intended to go back to New York. He replied:

"I am never going back. I am going to live in Canada and go into politics."

Should Governor Gouin refuse to interfere in the case, the New York officials will take the matter to Minister of Justice C. J. Doherty of the Dominion cabinet, whose word is supreme.

SUBTLE SYMPATHY PLEA IN "HARRY INTERVIEW"

The remarkable exclusive interview given by Harry K. Thaw to a staff correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN in Sherbrooke, Canada, has been a general topic for analysis and discussion in social Boston and New York and also among the wide circle of people who have followed the Thaw case from various motives.

It was generally agreed that while at first glance the interview might seem a bit puzzling, yet there is hidden within almost every line a subtle purpose which goes far to make this one of the most remarkable interviews ever given under such noteworthy circumstances.

While it is not quite clear why Thaw asks himself the question as to not being called Harry, he launches after that into a purpose which is more or less apparent. Writing his own questions and answers, he says that Mrs. Jack Leslie has called him "Harry" and other members of her family have done so.

This is a direct appeal to the Canadian people for their sympathy and interest.

A Play for Sympathy.

It has been said that the most popular woman in Canada today is the Princess "Pat" or Patricia, the daughter of the Duke of Connaught. Now Mrs. Jack Leslie is perhaps more intimately associated in the Canadian mind with the Princess "Pat" than is any other woman.

For years Mrs. Leslie, who was a New York girl, Leonie Jerome, was lady-in-waiting to the Duchess of Connaught. She prepared the trousseau of the Princess Margaret and for years has gone on shopping trips with the beloved Princess "Pat."

When Mrs. Leslie celebrated the silver anniversary of her wedding to Colonel John Leslie, the Duchess and Duke of Connaught were present.

Mrs. Leslie is also a sister of Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, the former Lady Randolph Churchill, and consequently the aunt of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty. Consequently, his repeated references to Mrs. Leslie in the interview and his constant statement of the terms of friendship on which he was with her and her family cannot do other than ring pleasantly in Canadian ears.

Appeal to Canadian Hearts.

Of like nature is his repeated assertion of friendship with Mrs. George Keppel and his relation of how he played bridge with the two women in London.

The Canadians of English origin have always had the fondest of fond spots in their hearts for the late King Edward. And they extended that friendly feeling to the most intimate of that Prince's women friends.

With quite the same appeal to the Canadian rank-loving people comes his statement of friendship with Lady Cunard, with the Marchioness of Ripon, the Princess of Pless, the Earl and Countess of Essex, the Pagets, Lord Louisdale and Lord Lurgan. For most of these persons were members of the gay set that King Edward gathered about him and kept in order.

Another subtle shading in the mind of Thaw is also apparent in his choice of just these names as those of the friends he made when he had a home in England. Most of the women are American women. It is as though Thaw tried by this means to appeal to the "hands across the sea" idea that Canadians might be expected to entertain.

He seems to be trying to remind them that, after all, he and they alike are sprung from the same stock and have many relations in common, and that also the British nobility has frequently recognized the equality of blood between the English and the Americans by marrying American women.

Lady Cunard, who is the arbiter of music in London, was Miss Maud Burke of New York. The Countess of Essex was Adele Grant of New York. Lady Arthur Paget was Miss Mary Paran Stevens of New York.

His mention of Lady Sarah Wilson as among his friends is also an appeal to Canadian sympathy, for she is the aunt of the Duke of Marlborough and of the house of Winston Churchill.

Since Thaw also speaks of Lord Lonsdale, "the sporting peer," as one of his familiars, he places himself in the minds of Canadians close to perhaps the most popular nobleman in England. Lord Lonsdale has been known to dance in public with coster women, which has added not a little to his popularity. He is a familiar figure at all London horse shows and is one of the active directors of any public enterprise at all concerned with English sporting life.

His Social Life Orderly.

There are other equally striking things about the exclusive interview that Thaw gave to the AMERICAN. When he speaks of his own social activities in New York he tells a story of a comparatively simple and orderly life. He places his story in the period prior to the time at which he met Evelyn Nesbit and by implication at least would suggest that when she came into his life his mode of life and the character of his friends changed.

He pictures himself as fighting rather shy of certain Bohemian entertainments and going to them only under protest. He seeks to show, too, that he knew people of the best standard socially.

He refers to an acquaintance with Mrs. James Henry Smith, the widow of "Silent" Smith, with Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, widow of a ship owner, and a sculptoress, and with the Livingstons and Van Alens, strict adherents of the old Knickerbocker standards.

He also seemed to be trying to show that he was not quarrelsome, as he tells of how he left a dinner at which there seemed to be a possibility of trouble.

Another touch of reality which Thaw gives to his narrative in his statement that those who constitute the circles of society which really lead are not dissolute people, but are as respectable "as farmers in Cambria County, Pa." A rank outsider might be expected to rail at the wickedness of the inner circles, having penetrated to only the fast sets, but we have the word of Thaw that at heart "real society is respectable."

The Love Story of Harry Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit

As Dramatic in Its Weaving As Any Fiction—And What of the End?

Chapter IV.

The secret of success is constancy to purpose.—Disraeli.

The stage Winter that beheld the birth of Evelyn Nesbit, the beauty child, in Pittsburgh, saw the admission to the New York bar of a young law student whose habits had marked him already as one of strong will and tremendous capacity for work. He also had an uncanny power of delving to the bottom of a given subject, of absorbing it, of commanding its authorities and proofs, of making himself master of it. This young attorney, destined to write his name broadly across the horizon of the metropolis, was named William Travers Jerome.

As a young man with a purpose in life, Jerome was the antithesis of Harry Thaw. His family had plenty of money, though not the reckless millions of the Thaws. His father, Lawrence Jerome, was a Wall street man. He made money freely and spent it the same way. The family had social position. Lawrence Jerome had one brother, Leonard, and the brothers married sisters. One of Leonard Jerome's daughters subsequently became Lady Randolph Churchill. So the hopeful young attorney, who was graduated from Columbia College in 1884 and who was admitted to the bar the same year, was connected by a cousin's marriage with the British nobility.

A Serious Boy.

Not that this elbow-connection ever inflated William Travers Jerome. He didn't take half so much interest in a decadent nobility as he did in the red-blood life of vigorous men, and in the affairs of his native city, especially its political doings.

New England had its interest in young Jerome, for this section of the country helped to educate him. He was not a strong boy, so he was tutored. Then he was sent, in 1877, to Williston Seminary, out in the Western part of Massachusetts.

He was a serious boy, somewhat of a Puritan, and a glutton for study. An incident at Williston gave indication of his inborn habit of absorbing knowledge like a sponge does water.

He entered a class in elementary chemistry, attended a few lectures, then failed to appear. Two weeks later he was called before the professor of chemistry, who said severely:

"Mr. Jerome, you have not been attending my lectures regularly."

"No, sir," said the youth calmly. "I didn't think it was of any use to me."

"And why not, pray?"

"I mean that I am ready to be questioned on any of the work that has to be done."

Answered Every Question.

The sceptical professor quizzed Jerome for an hour. Jerome answered every question with sure knowledge. The lad had simply taken the chemistry books and, by his genius for application and absorption, had learned all the course would give him, without being taught.

From Williston Jerome went to Amherst College, but was forced on account of ill health to leave there in his junior year (1881). A trip to Mexico restored him and he entered Columbia Law School and prepared for a legal life. He passed a brilliant examination for the bar. His intimates, who knew his ability to family'arise himself with a specified subject in a short time, remarked of him: "Wouldn't Jerome make an ideal prosecuter, he can dive so irresistibly into the real meat of an argument."

Time was to prove this.

CHAPTER V.

"According to Fates and Destinies and such odd sayings."
—Merchant of Venice.

Fate rubbed her hands and smiled. The events were shaping which should lead to greater events and these, in turn, should culminate in one of those blows which shatter petty human affairs like a man's foot wrecks a child's house of cards.

In Pittsburgh Baby Evelyn Nesbit was passing from prattling babyhood to the tempestous joys and sorrows of the little girl days. Her food parents saw with pride that she grew prettier every day. The mother, particularly, beheld her own comeliness indicated in her daughter.

The family struggled along on Winfield Scott Nesbit's indifferent earnings at the bar. The contrast between the Nesbits' circumstances and those of rich Pittsburghers was all the greater because some of the local families, like the Thaws, the Fricks and the Carnegies, were leaping to millions.

Generations of Spenders.

Occasionally the Pittsburgh newspapers would relate some lavish squandering of this wealth or some extravagant act of the younger set. The elders, those who built up these fortunes, were not so adept at throwing dollars right and left. But the next generation was already betraying a facility in spending that was causing unfavorable comment among thoughtful citizens.

Harry Thaw, then at Wooster, (O.) University, was lighting the way to fame by means of cigarettes, and his latest escapade, the runaway trip to Europe for a special brand of "coffin nails," had been the cause of much gossip among rich and poor.

Seeing that her work was progressing satisfactorily at Pittsburgh and at Wooster, Ohio, Fate turned her attention to New York. William Travers Jerome, the promising young attorney, had political friends. His father, Lawrence Jerome, was popular. Among the father's friends was "Dick" Croker, the "Boss" of the city. Lawrence Jerome was a democrat, so there was no political inconsistency in Croker doing a political favor for his Wall street acquaintance.

First Appointment.

One of the patronage plea in New York was the appointment of deputies to assist the district attorney. There is little secret in political circles when District Attorney Following announced the appointment, as one of his assistants, of William Travers Jerome, son of one of Croker's friends. This was in 1888. Jerome was started on the ladder which leads to the bench as public prosecutor and Fate smiled again.

The reader may say impatiently:

"What's all this got to do with Fate and Jerome happening to become an assistant district-attorney? Somebody had to get the job and what had it to do with Harry Thaw smoking cigarettes out on an Ohio school?"

Very well! Let it go as a "just happened."

It "just happened," too, that during the three years (1888-90) when William T. Jerome was Assistant District Attorney of New York, Stanford White, the famous architect, was producing work which was bringing him new and greater laurels.

He was then turning thirty years of age.

White's Triumphs.

In that year he designed the Washington Square Memorial Arch. And in the next year (1890) there was completed and was opened with much ceremony, what was regarded as Stanford White's greatest architectural triumph—the Madison Square Garden.

Fate surveyed that noble structure, from its colonnaded base to the St. Gaudens statue of Diana crowning the majestic tower. Fate lifted a lip and smiled again. The architect had wrought himself a fitting memorial.

Also, it had "just happened"—or Fate had caused it—that the year before Madison Square Garden was opened Harry Thaw's father, William Thaw, died in Pittsburg and left forty million dollars.

To be continued tomorrow.

Plan to Prove Thaw Sane in Penn State

Counsel Ready to Force Test Growing from $10,000 Dispute.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28.—Counsel for Harry K. Thaw have forced to a head a plan to bring about a test of his sanity in his native State. They will seek to have him examined by alienists appointed by the Pennsylvania courts. In the event of Thaw being adjudged sane and legally responsible, the Canadian authorities would face a situation wherein Thaw is declared sane and held in his native State and insane in New York.

The case, which comes up Saturday, grows out of the fact that Thaw, through his attorneys, has made a demand on the Fidelity Title & Trust Company for $10,000 with which to pay his counsel fees. This company holds more than $30,000 accumulated income from the trust in their hands for Thaw.

As soon as the trust company refuses to honor the demand for $10,000, as it will, on the ground that Thaw has been adjudged insane by the courts of New York, the new fight will begin.

WOMEN FLOCK ABOUT THAW SEEKING KISSES, SAYS MILDRED ELLIOTT

By MILDRED ELLIOTT.

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 27.—"Isn't he splendid looking?"

"Isn't he handsome?"

"Oh, I do hope they let him go."

"Look at that old Jerome over there. I just hate him."

This is the sort of talk I heard on all sides as I sat in the court room and looked at Harry Thaw. I don't mind saying that I agree with all the remarks I have quoted. Thaw is handsome. He is a splendid physical specimen, and his face is intelligent, and his smile is infectious. I like Thaw.

So do all the women of Sherbrooke. Some of them have declared openly that they would be willing to marry him. Several in court yesterday wanted to kiss him and less grasped his hands and touched his hatty grey clothes as he passed them.

If Judge Globensky had enforced the law yesterday he would have filled that grim, grey old jail with pretty girls. We all broke the law. We treated the majesty of the Dominion, as typified by nice, mild old Judge Globensky, with much contempt. We shouted and shrieked and cheered for Harry Thaw. We intended to do it again in the afternoon, only the old judge became very stern and he had a cold look in his eye when he said he would send to prison any person who disturbed the peace of his courtroom.

Murmurs of Sympathy.

I liked Judge Globensky. He was a nice, dignified, silver-haired gentleman, with mild manners. He reminded me of the superintendent of a Sunday school where I once was a teacher until my pupils discovered that there were questions about religion to which I didn't know the answer.

I don't know anything about court procedure. All I know is that you have to be in the courtroom an hour before the trial begins, or you won't get a seat. I got in early and was shown to a fine seat right near the judge. They told me afterwards that I was sitting in the jury box. I wondered why the view was so good, but I suppose the jury must be in a position to study the expression upon the faces of the prisoners. You can tell a lot by expression.

Right away, as soon as I saw him, I knew that Thaw wasn't crazy. My heart went out to him. So did the hearts of all the women around me. You could hear the murmurs of sympathy.

Expected Wild Man.

If Thaw had had an unkempt beard I suppose we wouldn't have felt for him so much. I think most of us expected a wild looking man with dissipation written hard upon his countenance and remorse for his bloody deed in his eye.

Instead, there came in a very well built young man with a frank, boyish face and laughing eyes. His mouth was a trifle large, but very good-humored, and the shape of his head was the sort that women love. He was plump and rosy and attractive. You could hear the "Oh's" of admiration. I confess to share them.

I liked his gallant bearing and his cultured manners. As he sat talking to his lawyers you could see his bright eyes passing along the lines of pretty, flushed faces, and I assure you that every woman kept her eyes on him.

Pretty soon the judge came in and everybody stood up and sat down quickly. Fearing, perhaps, they might lose their seats by their act of respect to the majesty of the law.

"Disagreeable Thing."

Mr. Shurtleff, one of Thaw's lawyers, was asking permission to do something about a writ of habeas corpus, which they tell me means "you may have the body." The judge seemed to disagree with him, and the girls around me murmured "disagreeable thing."

But at last they seemed to be reaching a friendly understanding, when there came an interruption. I had seen Jerome come in. I don't care about Jerome. He looks too much like Roosevelt. I don't see what he came up to Canada for and all the women around me agreed that he ought to be put right out of the courtroom.

I am a good American and I didn't like some of the remarks the women were making about the United States. However, I was in sympathy with them as regards Jerome. He sat there with a cynical grin, as though in a minute he would do something that would make everything else that had gone before sink into nothingness. He grinned on the other side of his face very soon.

La Force a "Dear Man."

But I tell you about the governor of the jail. Mr. La Force! He was a dear little man and he kept looking at Thaw with the funniest expression, like a boy who went after minnows and caught a whale. His face said as plain as could be, "Oh, see what a big fish I've got!" Thaw was very friendly with him, like a city boy with his old country father.

Just as all was quiet, up jumped a man with a beard who had been talking with Jerome, and who, I was told, is named Jacobs. Right away he began to object to the judge being friendly to Thaw and when the judge wouldn't pay any attention to him he began to give impudence.

Everybody around me was furious, and so was I. There didn't seem any excuse for his intruding with, "He's for Jerome," somebody said, and we began to hiss.

Told Him to Shut Up.

The judge practically told him to shut up, but he didn't mind, and turning to the judge's assistant ordered him to put down what he was talking about.

"Don't you do it!" cried the judge, very sternly. And then we all loved the old judge and hated the New York people with their lawyers, and we burst into one wild cheer for the spunk and backbone with which the judge had put him down. It was quite spontaneous and almost thrilling. Almost.

You could see that Jerome was startled, while Thaw's eyes filled and his lips quivered.

The judge didn't know what to do, for the people, stuff out of every respectable French, kept on cheering. So he declared 'this court is adjourned," and hurried right out of the room. Then somebody cried:

"Hurrah for Harry Thaw!" I never heard such cheering. It was deafening, and then we all fell upon Thaw and shook his hand and almost embraced him.

It was all very exciting, but they tell me that most court scenes are very dull, not at all like this. In the afternoon it was dull because the judge threatened to send us all to jail if we so much as whispered. But Thaw won something very important, only he must stay in jail for a while.

WOMAN SAYS HEALER CURED HER DISEASE

SOUTH FRAMINGHM, Aug. 28.—That Mrs. M. B. Woodworth-Etter, on trial here with her assistants, C. B. Fockler and Earl Clark, on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences in their faith healing work at Montwait, cured her of rheumatism and so improved the dead optic nerve in her right eye that the sight is returning, was the declaration made today at the Holy Rollers' trial before Judge Kingsbury by Mrs. L. M. Harris, fifty, of Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Harris was one of several witnesses introduced by the defence in an effort to refute the false pretence charges made by Chief of Police Holbrook on behalf of the government.

"I was suffering badly from rheumatism," said Mrs. Harris, "when I came to Montwait. The right optic nerve was dead. I offered myself as a subject. Mrs. Etter prayed over me, I fell over, and lay as in a trance, although I heard everything said near me.

"When I came to my rheumatism was gone. Now I feel like a girl sixteen years old. The white scum over my eye is healing and I surely will see soon.

"I never heard Mrs. Etter or her assistants take credit for the cures. My only doctor is Jesus."

The first witness called was Miss Sarah C. Easton of Bloomfield, New Jersey. She said Mrs. Etter was known to her for two years. She said she never knew Mrs. Etter took credit for the cures.

MISS ANGELYN SPEAR and Carl Perry, victims of a suicide pact; whose funerals were held at Rockland, Me.

ROCKLAND, Me., Aug. 28.—Carl W. Perry, the high school athlete, and his fiancee, Miss Angelyn Spear, who were found shot in a motor boat drifting seaward, are to be buried in the cemetery here.

The funeral of Miss Spear was held from her mother's home yesterday afternoon, and the funeral for young Perry took place today from his mother's home. The last resting place of the couple whose lives were suddenly cut off by revolver bullets from a weapon supposed to have been held in the hand of the athlete, is not far apart in the cemetery.

Coroner M. B. Judkins has been unable to find the motive for the death of the couple.

Hold Aeronauts As Spies in Italy

MILAN, Aug. 28.—Two military aeronauts were arrested at Galeriono today when they made a landing there in a Zeppelin dirigible balloon. They said they were from Innsbruck. The men had a number of photographs of Italian fortifications and these were seized.

NEW HAVEN TO HOLD MELLEN AS AN ADVISOR

From authoritative sources it was learned today that it is the plan of the directors of the New Haven Railroad system to retain President Mellen permanently in an advisory capacity on a much smaller salary than he now receives. One of the speakers at the stockholder meeting last week said that he understood President Mellen's salary to be $50,000 annually now. It is thought that he will receive about $12,000 as advisor to the new officers. It was also stated that Mr. Mellen would not remain a director of the road. It was stated today that directors of the railroad are not reconciled to the plan of dropping the dividend to a 5 per cent. for the next year unless the net earnings of the road prove to show material increase during the Fall.

The New Haven today filed at the State House a petition for the Public Utilities Commission for the issue of $67,332,000 in 6 per cent. bonds. This is the third petition filed and is different from the others in specifying that the bonds are to run for a period of more than one year after their date. Previously it was planned to have them twenty-year bonds.

Report Lost Maine Man at Haverhill

Sewall, York Beach Hotel Owner, Reported to Be in Bay State City.

YORK BEACH, Me., Aug. 28.—The disappearance of Arthur E. Sewall, who left here several days ago, leaving a note to his wife that he would not return, is still full of mystery. Sewall was proprietor of the Lyman-Hastings hotel, valued at about $28,000.

United States Marshal Ralph E. Hawkes has been appointed receiver of the property. There is a first mortgage of $20,000, held by Mrs. W. H. Hogarth, widow of the former proprietor.

Fifteen bellboys left in a body after receiving their pay last Saturday.

The dining room was closed today, but it was announced that the guests might remain until Saturday.

Sewall is said to have drawn the balance of his account last week from the York County Savings Bank, of which he was a director. He is reported to have been seen at Haverhill, Mass., Tuesday.

Hold Inquest on Manicure's Death

Associate Judge Frederick Hutchinson held an inquest today at the Dedham District Court on the death of Mrs. Marie Le Marie, the Norwood manicurist, who was found dead in her apartments on August 15. The inquest was conducted by Assistant District Attorney Fred Katzman, and the witnesses were heard privately. The witnesses today were Mrs. Thomas Carroll, Chief of Police James W. Lawson, Police Officers Erwin Hall, Cornelius Murphy, William Barrett, Dennis Hayes and Special Officer William Breen.

Break Suspect Held for Trial

Charged with breaking and entering and stealing four rings—three of them diamonds—valued at $700, Raymond Hutchinson, a South Weymouth youth, today pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 for a continued hearing September 6 by Judge Avery in the Quincy District Court.

Young Hutchinson is alleged to have stolen the rings from Mrs. Frances Tirrell of Pleasant street, South Weymouth. Two of the rings have been recovered.

Aviator Hawker $5,000

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Harry G. Hawker, the young British aviator, who had to abandon his around Great Britain flight for a $25,000 prize when almost in reach of his goal, will be rewarded for his pluck. The London Daily Mail today announced it would award him $5,000.

THAW LAWYERS NOW CONFIDENT HARRY WILL WIN FREEDOM

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 28.—With the defeat of William T. Jerome and his army of lawyers, and his falling back upon Quebec and Ottawa for ammunition in his fight to get Harry Thaw out of the Sherbrooke jail, the field today is in full possession of the fugitive's counsel, who declare that New York will never get Thaw into Matteawan as long as he lives.

It is even predicted that under the contemplated action by the New York authorities, Thaw's status as a sane man will be established by the State of New York itself, and the slayer of Stanford White may within a short time walk the streets of New York as a free citizen.

Dupuis Holds Key.

There is one legal key to the situation, and one man could, if he chose, cut the knot of red tape which has brought about the many contradictions and difficulties in the present situation.

He is A. L. Dupuis of Cantieook, the justice of the peace who committed Thaw to court a week ago. Under the law Dupuis has the right to order Thaw into court for re-examination, and then rectify the error in his commitment by releasing him.

But Dupuis refuses to take any further action in the matter, either to assist the New York authorities or the immigration officials.

Another attempt will be made today to get him to reconsider his decision. "I am neutral," he said, when asked to solve the problem.

Stone Is Jubilant.

Ex-Governor Stone, jubilant over his victory for Thaw, declared to the AMERICAN:

"You can see the feeling all through Canada for Thaw. We should worry. We were wearing the boots for a week, now let them have a try at it. We shall wait and see what move they will make."

Attorney Stone saw little hope for the New York appeal to the Premier of the Province, and was confident that Thaw will escape deportation, or other action which would throw him into the arms of the New York legal authorities.

"We have scored a great victory over Jerome, and more than that, we now have outlined our entire procedure in the fight that will end in freedom for Harry Thaw. He will never go back to Matteawan," said Attorney Harry Hirschorn of Newburg, N. Y., before leaving for New York today.

Needn't Avoid New York.

"By saying that Thaw will never again go to Matteawan, I do not mean that he will be compelled to avoid New York, for our plan may even include voluntarily going back there. Personally, I am leaving the case tomorrow, for I must return to New York, but the Canadian case, which will be fought through every court in the Dominion to which it can be carried, should it prove necessary, is in the best of hands in the admirable corps of attorneys retained here.

"I feel quite proud of the achievement which has been a signal victory today. Thaw does not go back, as planned. The habeas corpus writ, in my estimation, was distinctly an error, and it was through my efforts that the withdrawal was decided upon.

"Again the warrant upon which the State of New York hopes to secure Thaw's removal to New York State in itself opens the way to win Thaw's freedom.

Legally Freed and Sane.

"As we interpret the law, no such charge, nor any crime charge, can be placed against or became man. Should either the New York officials or we ourselves take Thaw into their jurisdiction we can demand trial and a verdict on the charge of conspiracy. In case of an acquittal on the charge Thaw would be legally free and sane. In case of a guilty verdict, Thaw would serve one year in jail and pay a fine, then going free as a sane man.

"We believe that in any case of an attempt to drop the charge, once this man was in New York we could carry this case straight through to the United States Supreme Court, where it should have been taken several years ago. I leave Thaw is on the road to freedom. He need never enter Matteawan again."

"Delay," Says Kennedy.

On the other hand, Attorney Frank Kennedy, for the State of New York, agreed with Jerome that the action means only delay. He said:

"Of the eventual deportation of Harry Thaw there can be no doubt. His effort to remain in jail in Sherbrooke cannot delay matters for more than a few days. It is only a question of the proper procedure to be followed. Steps are now being taken which will bring Thaw within the hands of the immigration authorities in a short time. But we must proceed carefully, for irregularities would only result in numerous appeals to the courts which would require a long time to straighten out. If Thaw should be released on bail, as has been suggested by some, he would be taken into custody instantly by the immigration authorities and not allowed the chance of escaping the jurisdiction of the Canadian authorities.

The immigration authorities will keep agents on the scene pending developments.

YOUNG WOOD AGREES TO CURB SPEED OF AUTO

"William M. Wood, Jr., has given the Highway Commission a writ on agreement not to drive his automobile at a rate exceeding twenty-five miles an hour," according to Chairman Sohier of the commission. "If Wood is caught driving at a higher rate than that specified, his license to operate a car will be revoked."

Chairman Sohier made this statement after young Wood had nonchalantly paid a $25 fine for speeding, in the Salem District court. The fine was imposed by Judge Sears.

Chairman Sohier said:

"The commission does not intend to allow Mr. Wood or anyone else to operate a car recklessly or at excessive speed. The commission has a written agreement signed by Mr. Wood promising not to operate a car at more than twenty-five miles an hour. I understand in this case, he was not going over twenty-two miles an hour. Therefore, his license will not be revoked, but the commission will carefully follow Mr. Wood's career, and if he be caught violating his agreement, his license will be revoked."

Has Amazing Auto Record.

Wood, who is twenty-one, is a sophomore at Harvard, and has an amazing auto record.

He has been fined three times for speeding, April 4, 1911, in Roxbury; June 14, 1912, in Malden, and September 20, 1912, on complaint of Edward Gingras.

Twice he has been arrested for operating a car without a license. In 1910 his license was suspended, after he had allowed an unlicensed person to run his car, resulting in an accident. In 1912 his license was again suspended. Later it was reissued.

His arrest for speeding, for which he was fined in Salem, was the second time he had been taken in custody within a few days.

In the Salem court young Wood was the first auto-speeder to be so called.

Pays with a Smile.

With a friend he sat in the rear of the crowded court room and listened to the charge of Chief Sullivan.

Wood took the stand and was asked by the court if he had ever violated the speed law before.

"Once before—in Lynn," he replied. "I have been driving a car for a number of years. I am acquainted with my car and was driving at a perfectly reasonable and proper rate of speed when apprehended."

Wood paid the $25 fine from a roll of bills. With a smile he tossed the money on the desk of the probation officer and walked from the court room. He and his friend drove off in a high-powered automobile.

Forbes Thinks No Offense Intended

Philippines Governor-General Excuses Lack of Formality.

MANILLA, Aug. 28.—The manner in which W. Cameron Forbes has been notified of the appointment of his successor to the Governor Generalship of the Philippines has aroused much comment here.

"I have no complaint to make of my treatment at the hands of President Wilson. While the manner of my notification that my services were no longer wanted lacked somewhat in formality, I feel certain that no offense was intended. Nor have I taken any. The President is a very busy man, with many cares and anxieties. Details of this sort are usually left to subordinates. It is improbable that he or Mr. Harrison even had cognizance of the matter."

Hay Fever Patients Re-elect Officers

Association Is No Joke, Big Sneeze Asserts.

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 28.—Five hundred hay fever patients gathered here today for the election of officers for the coming year for the United States Hay Fever Association.

The Rev. Guy Roberts of the Methodist Church here was re-elected Big Sneeze—otherwise president of the association. Percy F. Jerome of New York, secretary-treasurer, was likewise re-elected.

This was the closing session of the annual convention. Yesterday an "experience meeting" was held, and the sufferers recounted their sufferings. It is here that the best hay-fever yarns of the country come to the surface, and professional humorists gather here every year to pick up new quips for their own use.

Big Sneeze Roberts says:

"This association is a serious one. We have located seventy places in the United States and Canada where one may be practically immune from hay fever. That alone is a great work. We test, likewise, alleged remedies, and have yet to find a good one. But we are fair from being a joke."

DEDICATE OLD HOME OF DANIEL WEBSTER TODAY

FRANKLIN, N. H. Aug. 28.—Tardy recognition was given the birthplace of Daniel Webster by New Hampshire, when elaborate ceremonies were held today within and about the little house, now rebuilt, in which Daniel Webster was born. Former Congressman Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts was the orator of the day.

The Websters were residents of New Hampshire from 1636 on, when Thomas Webster first took up his home here. Ebenezer Webster, father of Daniel, fought in the Revolutionary War and in several Indian wars. He was a member of "Rogers' Rangers." Daniel was born on January 18, 1782, the ninth of a family of ten children. Ebenezer Webster first lived in a log cabin, where five children were born. His wife died shortly after Webster married again and they moved into the more pretentious home of four or five rooms where Daniel Webster was born.

Shot Ends Mad Dog's Dash in Quincy

Mongrel Bites Five Other Canines, but People Escape His Teeth.

People of South Quincy were today given a mad dog scare when a black-and-tan mongrel dog, frothing from the mouth, ran through the streets. Five other dogs had been bitten before the mongrel was killed.

The dog first appeared in one of the granite sheds of the district. Snarling and snapping he ran from one shed to another pursued by men throwing stones and hammers. Fortunately the dog avoided children and confined his attacks to other canines.

Captain Daniel R. McKay finally shot the dog at the corner of Liberty street and Liberty square.

This is the second dog to run amuck in Quincy within a short while. The dog's head will be sent to Harvard for examination. The dogs that were bitten were treated by Dr. Daniel R. Souther.

Free Eyeglasses for School Children

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—In a letter addressed to the Board of Education, Dr. Barnett L. Becker of No. 218 East Broadway has asked the board to inform all principals and teachers in the schools that he would give 3,000 pairs of eyeglasses free of charge to school children with defective eyesight who might be sent to his office with orders from principals, teachers, or visiting school nurses.

NORRIS GIRL ON STAND AT TRIAL OF CAMINETTI

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 28.—Lola Norris, the Sacramento girl F. Drew Caminetti is accused of enticing to Reno, Nev., was expected to take the witness stand today at the resumption of Caminetti's trial for alleged violation of the Mann white slave act.

Marsha Warrington, the girl in the case in which Maury I. Diggs, Caminetti's companion, was convicted a week ago, will follow Miss Norris.

The jury includes Benjamin H. Dibblee, former captain of the Harvard football team, now Pacific Coast manager for a firm of brokers, who is married but has no children.

Lola Norris to Address Jury.

Matt I. Sullivan, one of the government's prosecutors, in his opening statement to the jury, dwelt upon the character of the Norris girl. The prosecution seems to be more certain of the attitude of a jury toward Lola Norris.

"We will prove by the lips of Lola Norris herself that she was an absolutely pure girl up to the time she was ruined by Caminetti," Sullivan said.

As in the Diggs case, Judge Van Fleet proceeded to knock the underpinning from the defence's foundation. Marshal Woodworth, cross-examining for the defence, had moved to strike out the testimony of the railroad men on the ground that it was not pertinent to any of the four counts in the indictment against Caminetti.

Woodworth was asking a final question of S. A. Dedrick of Oakland, the negro porter of the car, in which the four occupied a drawing room from Sacramento to Reno. He wanted to know whether any woman had made any outcry or call for assistance during the night.

Blow to Defence.

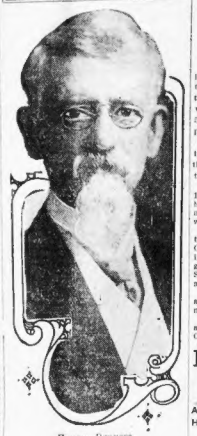
"There is no intent to show that the girls went other than voluntarily," Judge Van Fleet said. "The girls may have gone of their own free will, and made no objection during the trip, but that does not interfere with the fact that they may have been persuaded, induced or enticed to go." Referring to the pertinency of the evidence, Judge Van Fleet said:

"It is not necessary to show that the defendant handled the money or made the purchases of the railroad tickets and the drawing room ticket, to prove that he aided in the transportation of the two girls."

This statement made the defence wince. Young Caminetti was pleased over the fact that the record shows Maury Diggs bought the railroad tickets and paid for the sleeping car tickets. The defence was going to make a strong point of Diggs' leadership in the transaction.

What Telegraph Operator Has Seen Longest Service?

Is It Henry Denvers?



Henry Denvers.

The latest entrant in the AMERICAN'S search for the telegrapher who has manned a key for the longest continuous time is Henry Denvers of Springfield.

Although seventy years old, Henry Denvers, who started in as a telegrapher when twelve, is still actively engaged in sending messages. He has charge of the key in the contract department of the Western Union Company, Springfield.

Mr. Denvers, at fourteen, and charge of the Bellows Falls office of the company. At the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Denvers flashed the news in relay of the firing upon Fort Sumter. Later he flashed a message announcing the assassination of President Lincoln.

5,000 THRONG TO MUNICIPAL MOTHERS' DAY

The first municipal Mothers' Day and picnic in the history of Boston today attracted more than 5,000 mothers and their children to Overlook Franklin Park, where from 10:30 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon, one round of fun was provided.

So great was the demand for tickets that hundreds of mothers, especially in the Roxbury district were unable to secure tickets.

All morning Police Stations No. 9 and 10 were besieged by mothers accompanied by children, all eager for the tickets. In many cases, the failure to secure them was a deep disappointment.

The first events were automobile rides through the park, starting from near the Overlook building. Later in the morning, the music by the orchestras, hurdy gurdies and vocal quartets were enjoyed. Story-tellers, too, interested the children and the grown-ups as well.

Next came a Punch and Judy show, and then a baby exhibit and talks to mothers in the baby tent.

From noon until 1 o'clock the mothers and children enjoyed ice cream in the Overlook building.

Refuses to Marry Real 'Merry Widow'

Austrian Painter Hears That Fiancee Has $10,000 Income from Late No. 1.

VIENNA, Aug. 28.—Because of circumstances which bear a close relation to the plot of "The Merry Widow," the projected marriage of Mrs. Gustave Mahler, widow of the composer, who was formerly conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and the famous painter, Kokoschka, has been broken off. Mr. Kokoschka says in explanation:

"I have just learned that Mrs. Mahler has an income of $10,000 a year from the estate of her late husband. I think this is too much, so I won't marry her."

May Die, Following Suicide Attempt

Mrs. Mary E. Rexford, twenty-eight, is on the dangerous list after drinking carbolic acid at her home, No. 3 Waltham street, in an alleged suicide attempt, through despondency over the fact that her husband had started divorce proceedings against her. She was removed to the hospital on the order of Dr. E. J. Cotter, who was called by the woman's husband, who was in the room when the attempt was made.

Negro Robs Woman in Chelsea Home

Looking up from a book which she was reading in her home at No. 196 Shurtleff street, Chelsea, Mrs. William Rice was startled to see a large negro standing over her with a revolver. The man demanded money, and after securing Mrs. Rice's handbag and $4 in change, made his escape. It is believed that he made his entrance by means of false keys.

Death Bars Dancing by Isadora Duncan

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Pittsburgh Hansel has received a letter from Isadora Duncan, the dancer, in which she said it had been erroneously reported she was touring South America. "To dance would be a crime against the great lesson of death I am trying to learn in silence," she said. Mrs. Duncan's two children were recently drowned.

BROOKLINE MAN KILLS SELF AT HOME-LEAVING

Masnasseh A. Spear, aged 52, and residing at No. 37 Summit avenue, Brookline, shot himself through the heart a half-hour before he and his wife were to give up housekeeping by leasing their home to another family last night, according to police investigation today. He was found by his wife, lying in a hammock, with a 22-calibre revolver clutched in his hand, about half an hour before the other family was to take possession of his house.

WORLD'S BIGGEST SHIP FIRE SWEPT AT PIER; LOSS IS OVER $75,000

the fight against the flames. The room was seething hot and filled with smoke, but the men dashed in with lines of hose and soon thousands of gallons of water were being poured upon the blaze.

Flames Under Control.

By the dint of terrific labors the flames were kept from spreading into the first cabin and the superstructure, and within four hours the flames were under control. They had licked their way into the coal bunkers, however, and the firemen settled themselves down to carry on a patient fight.

The danger, however, to the balance of the ship was entirely over. Captain Ruser said:

"Acts of heroism mingled with acts of cowardice during the worst of the fire. The hero of the disaster was Second Officer Herman Gerbracht. This brave seaman voluntarily gave up his life while struggling to close the fireproof door to confine the flames in the provision room, or the fifth deck as it is technically known.

"Gerbracht was equipped with a helmet supplied with oxygen from pumps on the outside. The firemen who were working these pumps deserted their posts in a panic of fear. Gerbracht might have staggered to safety, but he clung to his task until he dropped and roasted to death."

Many Firemen Scorched.

Many firemen were burned by being swept off their feet by a back draught.

All the freight which had been brought over on the voyage ending here last night was in the ship's hold, and the effort of the ship's officers were redoubled in knowledge that loss of the cargo would add at least $1,000,000 to the damage.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. Captain Ruser expressed belief that it had been burning for some time before discovered. It was possible that it had ignited about 4 o'clock or sooner.

In telling the experience of his men Chief Gavin of the Hoboken fire department exclaimed:

"My God, it is a wonder any of us are alive! The ship is the most complicated thing inside we ever saw."

Fireboats brought firemen from New York city and rushed to the scene not only to fight the blaze upon the Imperator, but to prevent the fire from spreading to the crowded shipping district. The loss of life would probably have been heavier but for Chief Gavin. Captain Ruser ordered a number of seamen into the seething provision room to search for bodies, but Gavin would not let them go.

"You are sailors, not firemen, and you don't know how to protect yourselves," said the Hoboken chief. "I'll send some experienced men."

He did.

If the fire had occurred at sea, under the same circumstances, the tragedy would probably have been a duplication of the Titanic disaster.

MANY DISTINGUISHED PERSONS IN CABIN OF BIGGEST STEAMSHIP

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Imperator docked at Hoboken last night, coming up in the dark and completing the first leg of her fourth trip.

Despite the gathering darkness Commodore Ruse, docked his vessel with his usual clever promptitude. The crush of evening traffic held him up for a short time, while the Imperator swung in the tide, waiting for the ferryboats, pygmies beside her, to clear the way; then the big steamship swung around and slipped into her berth at record speed.

Many persons well known in society and the business world were on board. Among these were George Ade, the humorist; Julius P. Meyer, vice director of the line, and Mrs. Meyer; George J. Whelan, Allison V. Armour Royal Phelps Carroll, William Ellis Corey, Nathaniel Gidding, John Temple Graves, Charles H. Grasty, Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermyer, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Woolworth, and Mrs. George von L. Meyer of Boston.

The ship brought 703 first cabin, 882 second cabin and 1,745 third cabin and steerage—a total of 3,190.

Glynn Turns Back Man to Weymouth

Raymond Hutchinson, charged with the theft of jewelry and negotiable tickets worth $1,000 from the home of Mrs. Mary Tirrell, South Weymouth, has been brought back to Weymouth from New York, where extradition papers were honored by Governor Glynn.

The police say his arrest was brought about by the confession of Mary A. Brady, a former domestic for Mrs. Tirrell. They say the Brady girl admitted she entered the house, secured the valuables and turned them over to Hutchinson.

Three diamond rings, the police say, have been recovered.

Three, Despondent, End Their Lives

Three suicides, one from illness, the others due to despondency, will be investigated today. In the North End, Joseph Waldstein, sixty-five, cut his throat, and Vincenzo Desalina, thirty-seven, jumped from a fourth story window. Allan C. Curtis, sixty-eight, hung himself at his home in Medford.

Vault Combination Revealed in Dream

NEVADA, Mo., Aug. 28.—Miss Blanche Richardson, deputy-treasurer of Vernon County, dreamed the key to the lost combination of a vault in the treasurer's office, the door of which was accidentally closed. Arrangements made to drill into the door when Miss Richardson tried the figures revealed to her in the dream and the door opened.

Dr Tyzzer Returns from Research Work

Dr. Ernest E. Tyzzer, director of the Harvard Cancer Commission, has returned to his home in Wakefield after an absence of almost four months in South America, where he went with Dr. Richard P. Strong of Harvard, and Dr. C. T. Brues of the Bussey Institute, for the purpose of studying tropical diseases.

MARCHESA HOGE SAN GERMANO, former Kentucky belle, who has returned, unhappy, to America, and declares against international marriages.

NEW YORK, Aug 28.—Declaring that the American women cannot understand the code of morals of the average foreigner, solemnly, and that international marriages are accordingly unhappy, the Marchesa Hoge San Germano is home in America again, through forever with her noble Italian husband. She was, until three years ago, Miss Virginia Hoge, a widely noted Kentucky belle.

"American girls," she declared, "undergo strange disillusionment when they become the wives of foreign noblemen. They never understood the code of American matrimonial standard are also beyond the comprehension of society abroad.

"The American girl marrying at home is often the victim of a drinking husband. But drunkenness she may understand, even though she does not approve. The American man drinks to excess frequently, the foreigner seldom or never, but the foreigner's peculiar code makes a happy marriage with an American woman impossible.

"Gambling is one of the worst vices of the noble European, and no American girl can stand that and retain her self-respect. I, for one, am tired of it all and refuse to submit to it any longer.

"Ours was a love match," she continued. "My husband was wealthy and did not marry me for my money. I thought happiness was to be our lot, and looked forward to my married life in Italy. But our romance was soon at an end.

"I suppose there are just as good men in Italy as there are anywhere, but I should not advise American girls to marry foreigners."

HUERTA ASKS WILSON FOR CONCESSIONS

until after the presidential election in Mexico in October.

The text of the answer of Frederico Gamboa, Mexican Foreign Minister, to the note sent to him by Special Envoy Lind, under date of August 23, characterized by Foreign Minister Gamboa as Mr. Lind's second note, after reviewing the steps and conditions of the negotiations between them, proceeds as follows:

Would Favor a Loan.

And add furthermore, Mr. Confidential Agent, that the President of the United States of America has authorized you to say that if our government "acts immediately and favorably upon the foregoing suggestions," that the President will express to American bankers and their associates, assurances that the government of the United States of America will then look with favor upon the extension of an immediate loan sufficient in amount to meet the temporary requirements of the present Mexican administration.

At the end of your note, Mr. Confidential Agent, you express the hope of your government, that my government will judge it consistent with the best and highest interests of Mexico, immediately to accept such proposition, stating that they are submitted in the same spirit and to the same end as the original proposition, put in a more restricted form, to the end that my government may act within its faculties with out the co-operation or aid of any other outside factor.

It appears at once, Mr. Confidential Agent, that in this case the proposal of his excellency, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, is not to remove himself an iota from the position originally assumed by him, for, notwithstanding the time consumed since the 16th, the date of my reply to the 27th, in which you delivered to me your second note which I am here answering, the essence and even the form of his original instructions are the same and the aggravating features well qualified by you as "More restricted."

"Forbearance to Last Point."

For my part it would have been sufficient to answer this note in its totality by regarding the whole of my note of the 16th instant as negative as categorical, as I have the honor to reproduce it in this present note.

But the President ad interim wishes to carry his forbearance to the last point, and to the end that Mexican public opinion, which is so justly disturbed by the present tension in the diplomatic relations between the two countries, may be satisfied; and, also to the end that the various foreign governments, which have offered their good offices in the most delicate possible manner (I am glad to repeat that this has been their attitude, and not less pleased to express grateful acknowledgment thereof) may be duly informed, has authorized me to reply to you in the following terms:

It will begin by taking notice of a highly significant fact. Between the night of the 26th and 27th I received the sheets containing your instructions, not directed to any one and calling the present administration "The persons who at the present time have authority or exercise influence in Mexico——" and yesterday, some progress has been made. In that now the constitutional President ad interim (See paragraph 2 of the new propositions) is called President Huerta," and in the whole course of the note the personnel of his administration is referred to as the "de facto" government.

But inasmuch as this or that qualification is of no importance upon the ground that all the representations of your government have not been initiated, except with ourselves, which gives us, upon the supposition that we have not been dispossessed of it, a perfect political and moral personality to clear up the present divergence, I intentionally limit myself solely to point out the facts.

IDENTITY OF STARVING GIRL DISCOVERED

The identity of the young woman who lived for eleven days on two quarts of milk—in her room at No. 59 Appleton street—before she was removed to the Psychopathic Hospital, was today established. Her belongings showed she was Miss Mildred Whiting, a domestic for eight years in the family of G. O. Mellvaine of Beverly, N. J.

For the past six months she has been a resident of Philadelphia, employed by Thomas McKean of Rosemont. When the family went to Dark Harbor, Me., they took the girl along, but later discharged her.

It is believed that this discharge preyed on her mind, so that she was mentally unbalanced when she came to Boston.

Make $26,000 Gem Haul In Chicago

Thiefs Overlooked Another Sample Case With $100,000 of Jewelry.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—The police today faced a deep mystery in the theft of $26,000 worth of gems from a big downtown jewelry store. The thief, the police believe, intended to steal the sample case of William N. Antolne, salesman for an Eastern firm, but made a mistake and took the sample cases of Charles H. Anderson, salesman for a Philadelphia house.

Antolne's sample case contained $100,000 worth of stones. The theft was committed, it was believed, by one of a gang of expert jewelry thieves attracted to Chicago by the National Convention of Jewelers.

MORE THAN 100 GIRLS ENTER IN SWIM CARNIVAL

More than 100 girls are entered for the AMERICAN'S great swimming carnival, to be held in the Charles River Basin on Saturday, from 2 to 6 p. m. This is the largest number to enter an affair of this kind. The entry list closed yesterday at 5 p. m.

That the affair will be a magnificent success is evidenced in the interest manifested in all sections of the State. A record-breaking crowd is expected to attend. There is room for all to see the race.

Mothers are invited to bring their little ones. The air at the basin is cool and invigorating. Physicians say the place is a regular tonic for men, women and children.

Last year 125,000 persons saw the race. Remember, the AMERICAN inaugurated the carnivals as an incentive to mothers to bring their children for a day's outing.

Some of the best swimming girls from all sections of the State will be seen in aquatic stunts. A corps of life guards will be on hand to protect the participants in the race.

Should the weather be inclement, the carnival will be held the following Saturday at the same hour and place.

The Swimming Editor wishes to announce that all participants MUST report at the tent provided for them near the boat landing of the Metropolitan Park Commission at 2 p. m. Each girl will be provided with a number. But one attendant will be allowed each participant.

The course mapped out for the race will be along the Boston side of the Charles River lower basin, between the Union Boat Club landing and Harvard bridge. The turn will be made for the return trip at a stake boat marked with the letter "S."

ANNIE JACOBSON, Roxbury girl, who will be one of contestants in American's swimming carnival.

Fisherman Hit by Bolt in Storm

Every Man on Annie and Jennie Stunned by Shock of Lightning.

The fishing schooner Annie and Jennie, Captain Joseph Cooney, docked today after a thrilling experience in yesterday's thunder storm. The schooner was off Gloucester when the storm swept over her.

Lightning struck the mainmast and broke it. The lignum vitae bull on the tip was splintered. Every man of the fifteen aboard except the captain was stunned by the shock. One man was paralyzed for over five hours, and another was deaf for half that long.

When the lightning struck the boat was surrounded for a moment, Captain Cooney said, by a magnificent shower of sparks.

Ex-President Taft Is City Club Member

CASSIDY SHOWS DEFECT IN LAW ON PURE FOODS

Dr. Alsberg, chief of the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, has recently pointed out three defects in the national pure food law. He makes a point that there is a lack of standardization on State and Federal requirements. Mr. Cassidy points out why there is such a lack of standardization.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, chief of the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, has recently pointed out three defects in the national food law.

Dr. Alsberg says these defects are:

1. The futility of the guarantee label used by many manufacturers.

2. The necessity of protecting both owner and public in the denaturing of domestic food substances unfit for food.

3. The lack of standardization in State and Federal laws on food.

I want to take up the last of these defects first. I would heartily agree with Dr. Alsberg in a standardization were I assured that such standardization would promise effective checks on the food dopers and swindlers.

Dr. Alsberg forgets that the Food and Drugs Act of 1906 as originally framed was an admirable law. It would be an admirable law today but for the influence that politicians and the interests have had in drawing out its teeth.

You remember the various methods used in the Taft administration for nullifying the law and aiding the food dopers in their dishonest practices.

First it was the appointment of the Remsen board with the pernicious activity of the famous Solicitor McCabe; then the removal of Dr. H. W. Wiley; next the dilly-ing and dally-ing which has taken them seven years to reach a definite decision as to the harmful results of the use of sulphites as preservatives.

Why, it was only recently that this dilatory board barred the poisonous drug saccharin from its use as a sweetener of food instead of sugar.

In the face of all this who can blame a progressive State which wants to protect the health of its people and refuses to follow the ruffle windings of a joke law.

I believe that the States are right when they refuse to agree to follow a national law which can be so easily juggled and made harmless. I believe the States are right when they pass laws of their own. Were they content to follow the leader with the national law as it exists today as a leader, the food dopers and cheaters would have a wide open swing.

REP. THOMAS J. CASEY OF SOUTH BOSTON.

This is a Democrat in the Legislature who respects the solemn pledges of his party platform and wishes his State well. He voted to sustain the Governor's veto of the Western Trolley Merger Bill, a bill which gave the New Haven Railroad control over more than half the street railways in the State.

There never was a bill so universally condemned by all disinterested people who gave it a moment's thought. It was condemned alike by the Democratic platform, the Railroad Commission, the Tax Commissioner, the Public Franchise League, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Real Estate Exchange and the Interstate Commerce Commission, all of which were disinterested bodies and experts on railroad matters.

About it the Governor said:

"THIS BILL OFFERS ONLY A PRETENSE OF A CONSIDERATION IN EXCHANGE FOR THE FAVORS SOUGHT, AND UNDER IT VERY FEW TROLLEY LINES NEED BE BUILT IN THE COUNTIES WHICH EXPECT TO BENEFIT BY THE BARGAIN."

If the forty-five Democrats who voted against this bill had followed the example of Mr. Casey and heeded the warning of the Governor they would not experience the opposition which they now have in their scramble for political office.

Will Unfold Plans to Auto Dealers

By J. C. KERRISON

Something new in the selling line will be sprung on the automobile dealers of New England, who have been invited to a luncheon and "talk" to be given by District-Manager Coburn of the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation tomorrow at noon. The big gathering of dealers will meet at the M. B. M. Motor Company, 1118 Boylston street, at 11:30, and luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock.

The luncheon is not strictly a Maxwell affair, because invitations have been sent out to automobile dealers, irrespective of the line that they handle. From the most remote corner of New England these dealers will come to Boston as the guests of the Maxwell Company.

District Manager Ralph Coburn will preside, and General Sales Manager Charles Redden and other officials of the company will be present to unfold what they describe as "the most attractive and interesting agency proposition that has been given to the automobile trade." In other words, they will make known their proposition to New England dealers who are in the market to handle an automobile line.

General Sales Manager Redden "pulled" this unique selling plan in various sections of the country, and it proved to be a big winner, and in one Middle West district there were 186 dealers showed up, and before the affair was over the entire allotment for that district was contracted for.

Few years go by without substantial additions to the plant of the HIGHLAND SPRING BREWERY, the home of Sterling Ale.

GROWING demand for this good brew brings steady call for new buildings and equipment.

First it is for larger mills to grind the grist. Then for more fermenting tuns. Now it is for new rackers to fill the casks, and more efficient machines to wash and sterilize them. Again, deliveries have the call, and a fleet of great five-ton motor trucks re-enforces our horse-drawn waggons.

Most insistent of all, in the case of our honest, fully-matured ale, is the demand for ever-increasing storage-vaults, in whose cool shadows Sterling may ripen and mellow against the day it shall meet your nickel at the blue and white tap.

MANY men, many minds. No such problem confronts brewers willing to hurry their ale to market. No such problem vexes the brewer of filtered, carbonated fresh ales. But that is not the Sterling way.

This month the scaffoldings come down from another great new building—positively the last word in ale-storage construction. And already, before the workmen are out, it is filling up with thousands on thousands of casks of Sterling Ale.

From cellar to roof, it must be October the year around. Hence, as one detail, another new ice-machine equal in capacity to the melting of 150 tons of ice each day.

YET, massive as this new building is; it represents little more than a third of our total ale-storage.

There is nothing like it in America. That we know.

Pile this great structure, and another like it, one upon the other. Add half as much again. Fill the whole with Sterling Ale maturing to your order.

That is our answer, in storage alone, to the problem of giving you full ale value and full ale satisfaction for your five-cent piece.

Match it, if you can.

WE are proud. Proud of this new building. Prouder of the business growth that makes it necessary. Proudest of all of those swelling legions of ale-loving friends—dealers and consumers alike—whose pleasure in our good brew makes business and building possible.

Bricks and mortar can build a great plant to be the home of a great brewery; but a great brewery can be builded upon nothing else than public confidence in its conduct and public satisfaction in its product.

We like to think that each new brick stands for one more consumer well pleased with Sterling Ale. If this be so, then to how many thousands—old friends and new—does the Highland Spring Brewery pledge good will and good faith in "Ale that is Ale"?

PRESS GOLFERS IN SEMI-FINALS AT BELMONT C. C.

The semi-finals in all divisions of the Press Club's championship tournament were started today at the Belmont Springs Country Club of Belmont.

In the first flight, which is playing for the championship and the Charles H. Taylor trophy, E. M. Taft of Woodland met Rodney W. Brown of Belmont, the latter being the favorite by virtue of his former sterling play.

In the other half A. M. Crosby of Chestnut Hill, who had beaten in order Frank H. Hoyt, the champion, and Arthur G. Lockwood, former State champion, should not have difficulty in winning from G. A. Whittemore of Hatherly, a youngster of fair ability.

The second, third and fourth divisions that are playing for cups offered by the AMERICAN, Post, Journal, Record and Advertiser, also started their semi-final contests with good matches resulting.

The amateur record for the course was broken by F. H. Hoyt yesterday in his match with G. L. Sweett in the beaten eight of the first sixteen. Hoyt played a 75, which is two strokes better than F. W. Whittemore's 75, played in the State foursomes a few days ago.

Today a handicap vs. par competition was held, in which a large field played. Tomorrow a medal handicap tournament will be held and as many more are expected for that.

One thing paramount during the recent tour at Belmont has been the wonderful condition of the course. All of the players have been pleased beyond measure with what has been done there since the early Spring, and "Sandy" Hanford, the well known expert, comes in for his share of the credit.

The Belmont Springs Country Club has perhaps the brightest future of any of the clubs in this State, for it has plenty of room to grow, is near Boston and has land enough to double the length of the course if it were desirable. Most of the experts feel that it cannot be many seasons before the Belmont Springs Country Club will receive a national championship of some sort and many important State tournaments.

Flynn Lacks Heart to Make a Star Boxer

West End Heavyweight Will Have Hard Time Securing Matches in Future

By JACK CONWAY.

BOXING "fans" are still discussing Sam Langford's decisive victory over "Porky" Flynn at the Atlas A. A. The majority of them are unable to understand why the powerful West End heavyweight was unable to make a better showing against the "Tar Baby," who was not at his best. The answer is very simple. Flynn lacks the heart of a fighter.

"Porky" is perfectly developed, standing six feet two in his tall and with a great reach and plenty of weight. He is built on the lines of a champion. A successful boxer, however, must have something besides mere beef and strength. That "something" is usually known as courage. Among fistic lovers a fighter who is not game is said to be without a heart.

Flynn will probably never again receive a chance to perform in a Boston ring. He has sealed his own doom. "Porky" made a poor showing against Jim Barry at the Pilgrim A. A. last summer, but the "fans" were anxious that he be given another opportunity to make good.

Flynn has always been a big favorite here because he is a local boy. His poor showings have been overlooked because his friends thought he would improve with age. But he has not and will experience a great deal of difficulty in keeping busy within the squared enclosure.

WOODMAN TALKS OF REFEREE.

JOE WOODMAN, manager of Langford, claims that the reason why he refused to permit Maffitt Flaherty to referee the big "go" was because the articles of agreement stipulated that Sheehan should be the third man in the ring. This may be so, but we still believe that it is poor policy to oust a referee from a fight once he has crawled through the ropes. It casts a veil of doubt over the minds of the spectators. Fortunately there was no cause for Sheehan to make a decision which might be questioned.

It would not be a bad idea to announce the referee for important bouts a few days before the contest takes place. There would then be no eleventh hour disputes.

M'GOORTY WOULD BOX HERE.

EDDIE McGOORTY, who was once not known far and wide as the Oshkosh whale, is seeking a bout in our fair city. McGoorty is now in New York and Joe Levine, the popular Boston sporting man, who is passing away a few pleasant hours in the big city, wires that nothing would please McGoorty any better than a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. with either Frank Klaus or Jack Dillon.

The Western youth is planning a [illegible] enclosure, which he feels confident will end in his being recognized as the world's middleweight champion. Klaus, Dillon, Clabby and Gibbons are the leading middleweights in the world, and if it is an open question whether Klaus and Dillon are able to make the middleweight limit of 158 pounds. McGoorty is also a big middleweight, but claims that he can reduce himself to 158 pounds without injuring his fighting ability.

EDDIE IS GOOD BOXER.

McGOORTY would be able to make [illegible] things interesting for either Klaus or Dillon. He is a good boxer and a hard puncher. Eddie is not bashful in stating that he would prove too fast and skillful for either Klaus or Dillon.

McGoorty was signed to meet Leo Houck at the Atlas Club several months ago, but called off the bout. He is anxious to prove to New England fight "fans" that he is the best middleweight in the world, and may have a chance to display his wares at the local club some time next month.

BOUTS AT WILLIMANTIC.

THE boxing season will be opened in Willimantic, Ct., on Labor Day, Eddie Flynn, the Lynn lightweight, will clash with "K. O." Paltz in a twelve-round whirl, while Tommy McFarland of the South End will exchange punches with "Young" Aronson of East Boston in an eight-round contest.

PENINSULA RIVALS TRAINING.

THERE is no rest these days for Eddie Murphy and Joe Eagan, the two clever South Boston lightweights. These two boys are training hard for their twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. on next Tuesday night, and if the "dope" does not go wrong, the contest will be one of the best staged between lightweights in this city for many months.

Murphy is boxing in grand style, as he recently proved when he easily vanquished Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea. In Eagan, however, Eddie will meet a boxer who is skilful and who can punch with the best of them.

BOSTON BUILT BOAT TO DEFEND AMERICA CUP

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

It became known today that plans are under way for the building of a boat to contend with the two New York boats in the trial races to pick a defender of the American cup against Sir Thomas Lipton.

The boat, according to present plans, will be built here and will be designed by one of the most prominent yacht designers in the country, who is a Boston man. The syndicate will be made up of Boston and Philadelphia capital.

One of the members of the New York and Eastern Yacht Club members, who is interested in this project, although he will not at this time name anyone of the syndicate interested in the Boston boat, said today that the plans have so far matured that the building of the cup boat is almost a certainty.

For some months this story has been going the rounds of yachting circles without much attention being paid to it. At the recent visit of the New York Yacht Club to Marblehead, the proposition was finally put into shape and the work of financing the project started.

Vanderbilt Heads Syndicate.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, who heads one syndicate and for whom Herreshoff will probably design the boat, has said publically that he hopes to see the trial races participated in by several boats from the designing tables of the best that this country can produce and would willingly step one side with his boat if beaten.

It has been some years since Massachusetts has figured in a cup race or even a trial race. The days of the late Edward Burgess and the Puritan and Mayflower, successful in the defence of the historic trophy, are always looked back upon with considerable pride by Eastern yachtsmen, but then comes the cry, "Why not another?"

The fact that Herreshoff has been so successful in his boats has tended to stifle the interest beyond New Yorkers, who are Herreshoff men pure and simple.

With the plans now under way for a Boston boat, the trial races will be interesting. It is assured that Herreshoff and Gardner will both have boats in the trial races, and perhaps a Chicago syndicate may come through with a boat.

One of the men mentioned in the Boston syndicate as a possible manager of the racing syndicate and a supervisor of the designing of the Boston boat is A. Loring Swasey, one of the best yacht designers in this section of the country and a member of the New York Yacht Club.

Refuse to Divulge Plans.

Mr. Swasey when asked about his connection with the syndicate was just as secretive as others on the matter.

Mr. Swasey did say however: "I know something about the plans for a trial boat and something about the men who are in on the deal. I don't care to say much more about it just now."

It was learned today that a movement is under way among prominent yachtsmen to have Butler Ames and those interested in the ownership of the old cup boat America, now laying up at the Summer street steamboat wharf near the South Station, to have this good old schooner that lifted the cup from England and brought it over here, put into condition next year and sailed over to the cup races at New York.

ZIMMERMAN OF THE CUBS IS MISSING

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—As the Chicago Cubs were leaving here it developed today that Heinie Zimmerman, the famous third baseman, has been missing since Tuesday morning. He immediately was suspended for three days because of a rumpus with the umpire at the polo grounds on Saturday, and some of the Chicago players seemed to think that he looked for this penalty so that he could get a vacation. In fact, it was asserted that Zimmerman had not treated Manager Evers with fairness.

Zimmerman rode to the Cubs' hotel Tuesday in an automobile and sent in word to Secretary Charley Williams of the Chicago club that he wanted money. Williams provided him with $50 and Zim rode away with his companions, promising to report at Ebbetts Field that afternoon. But he did not show up and was away from the hotel all night. He did not appear at all yesterday and Evers was up in arms. It will be interesting to hear from Owner Charles Webb Murphy when he learns what has been going on.

Bay State Team in National Shoot

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 28.—Conditions more suitable for marksmanship could not be imagined than were those yesterday, the second and final one for the preliminary practice for the National match, which starts today. The Massachusetts team had a very satisfactory day's work and Colonel Joshua Upton will put the Bay State men into the contest, satisfied with what they have done.

The new arrivals, the French, Swiss and Swedish teams, visited the firing line and some of the men fired a few shots to get a fine upon the targets and ranges. This morning there was practice work on the ranges of the 200 metre targets by all the foreign teams.

Clarke Wins Match Race.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 28.—Jackie Clarke defeated Robert Spears in straight heats in their one mile match race at the Velodrome here.

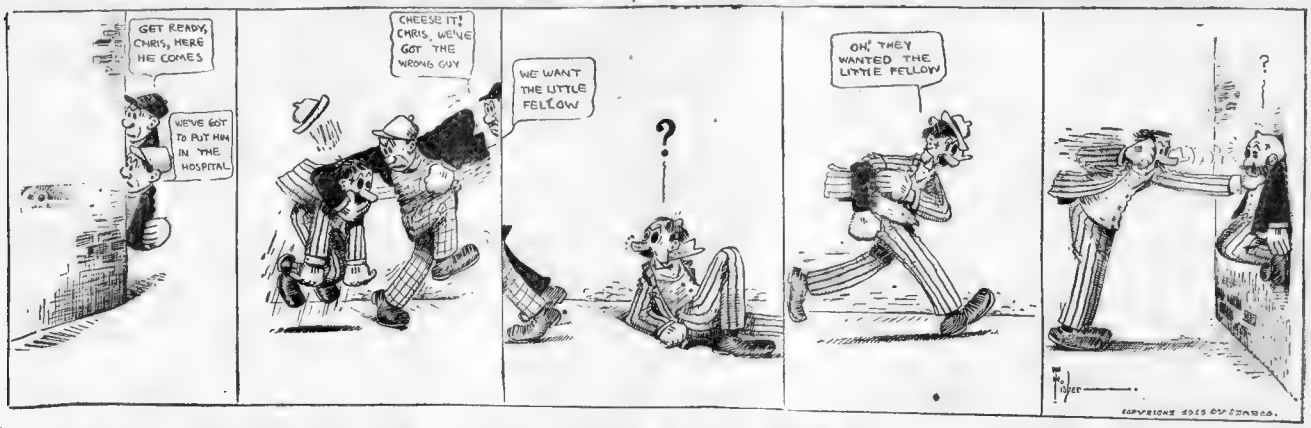
RED SOX OPEN HOME PLAY WITH SENATORS TODAY

Mutt Hated to See Jeff Miss What Was Coming to Him — By "Bud" Fisher



JOHNSON WILL FACE RED SOX IN GAME TODAY

The Washington Senators will open their series with Boston at the Fenway Park this afternoon, as the last game will be played at Washington this morning. The Senators have been greatly strengthened since the return from the world tour, and will be among the Western aspirants. Just how much the addition of Gandil will help is a question, but he is a star of the first water, and will be a big factor in the Senators' success.

All fashion but that will face a different team this afternoon, as the last game has been greatly strengthened since the return from the world tour, and will be among the Western aspirants. Just how much the addition of Gandil will help is a question, but he is a star of the first water, and will be a big factor in the Senators' success.

Good pitching, another one that Griffith will count figure on in this series for the locals, should the first be lacking. Arnold Meadows and Leonard will be the mainstays of Griffith's staff, and the most rapid fan

Johnson Out for Record.

Washington will have probably a fresher staff of pitchers here as Walter Johnson, Joe Boehling and Joe Engel, and Bob Groom will get their regular turns in the box during the three contests.

Johnson will pitch first, Clark Griffith has promised, and if all Pedagogue goes well he will be in the box again on Saturday.

Johnson is now in the midst of a series of games with Boston's Red Sox, as he has defeated them in each of his last four starts.

Just how successful Johnson will be this afternoon is a matter of guess, but there is one thing certain, we will get what will be one of the best games that is booked for Fenway Park this season. He has opposed Hall on two occasions this season. He beat him once, 1 to 0, on May 31, and was defeated by the same score on July 4. Hall pitched a wonderful game on the latter occasion, but was unfortunate in that he was touched for a run in the first inning, when Speaker singled, went to second on Hooper's out, and scored on Lewis' single to right field.

Hall has been pitching great ball of late, and has won his last four starts, defeating Detroit twice, Cleveland and Chicago. He has a record of eight victories against four defeats this season. Walter got an early start, as he was in the box for the Red Sox in the opening game of the season, on April 10, when he defeated Chicago by a 5 to 3 score. Walter has been pitching great ball all season, and has a record of 15 victories against 10 defeats. He has pitched in 30 games, and has finished 19 of them. He has also pitched 317 innings, which is the most of any pitcher on the staff.

"MADAM, do you know a Dr Moleon-orth of this city?"

"Are you sure that no such person was invited to your daughter's wedding?"

"Positive."

"Then, if he was here at all, he was here against your invitation?"

"Why, I do not know that he was, but he is the person who professed to pick up Miss Farley from the stoop of a house in Twenty-second street, and as that story is somewhat incredible, we are trying to prove he carried her away from this house, where she certainly was in attendance on Miss Gretorex as early as 9 o'clock in the evening."

"Then all you wish of us is to prove that attendance."

He bowed

"What we prove it then, in a simpler way I cannot see. Knowing any whether she was any such person with her or not."

He knew why this was asked. He knew that the mother's heart was throbbing with anxiety about all her pride and self possession in such a weak her equally proud daughter, forced it under her control and saying in different:

"I have not a question, Mrs. Cameron" he replied [illegible] but it is the fact that she was escorted out of doors to the point I take it for granted that she does not know the [illegible] and hence the question you ask."

With a quick movement both turned. Mrs. Cameron, bonneted and wrapped in furs, was standing before them in the open doorway.

Mrs. Cameron at Her Worst—and Best.

FOR an instant Mrs. Gretorex and the detective, so dissimilar in all other regards, wore the same expression of disconcertion, but only for an instant. She from policy and he from custom soon assumed an aspect of self-possession; and Mrs. Gretorex, speaking in behalf of both, observed, with a nonchalance that the other secretly admired

What the New Wraps Will Be Like

By OLIVETTE

THE new wraps for Fall wear will be exceedingly attractive, with many oddities of cut and design. The two models shown in the illustration are typical.

Delightful is the little evening coat of brocaded satin, with touches of soft marten, fox or lynx, and a unique touch is added by the little tassels of fur on the trimming cord, and the edging of fur on the rosettes that finish the cording bow at the neck.

Wide bands of the material cover the arm from shoulder to wrist, opening kimono fashion. To these the material is shirred over a cord in one continuous piece from back to front, the only break coming in the shirring onto the front cord.

The popular needle-cord of the Spring is being reproduced in the heavier boucle weaves of the Fall modes. The horizontal stripe is most becoming to a slender figure, but should be carefully eschewed by the woman who has a tendency to avoirdupois.

The skirt of the model shown fastens at the left front and is cut off a foot from the floor in front with a gradual backward lengthening until it just escapes the ground at the back. A broad cord marks the line of this hem on this overskirt. The tiny plain underskirt is of the cloth with the stripe running perpendicular to the line of material. This underskirt is slit over the left ankle.

The coat is cut on far more elaborate lines, and has a very unusual "break" of brocaded satin which extends in deep points far below the waist line, where it is confined by cords like that used on the skirt. The buttons are of the satin, edged by circles of the cord. Tiny buttons and cord fasten the vest, and a collar and wee revers of lace-edged mousseline finish it at the throat.

The sleeves are cut in one piece with the square yoke that extends directly across the shoulderblade at the back. This yoke is edged in the braid, and the draped sleeves are banded with it above and below the triangular inset cuff-piece of the brocade. The lower part of the coat falls in a straight line from this yoke, and is trimmed by great frogs of the braid and brocade buttons directly below the line of the yoke in front

The TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY of its kind since JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

OVER two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men are at work pushing a great tunnel out under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering scheme ever conceived by the brain of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived on the scene, after a trip from shore to a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and earth and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then follows a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot away from the disaster, and after hours they come into the view of faint lights at main station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach the steps of the rear car, the train slides out into the tunnel and leaves them screaming and cursing and pursuing in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A score of financiers are gathered on the roof of the fifty-two-story Hotel Atlantic, called together by the summons of Lloyd, the master man of money. There, intrigued by Rives, McKendree Allan, the inventor, tells them of his great plan to tunnel the Atlantic. "My tunnel," he says, "is going to be 3,100 miles long."

The tunnel city is built on the Jersey plains, and work is pushed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredgers, push down into the bowels of the earth. Similar scenes are being enacted in Bermuda, Faral, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London. Allan is the moving spirit everywhere. He is almost never at his home in Tunnel City, and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt. Mrs. Allan and Rives find they love one another and they kiss. He blames himself, but she tells him it could not be helped.

When the news of the disaster in the tunnel reaches the surface the workers go crazy. Harriman, Rives' chief of staff, is mobbed and flees for his life. He races in his auto and tells Mrs. Allan. Not supposing the mob is anywhere near her house, she goes out on the street. Allan returns to Tunnel City to find his wife and child slain. He runs a rescue train into the tunnel and finds Rives, white haired and exhausted, transformed in appearance into an old man.

The workmen are thoroughly frightened by the explosion and refuse to enter the tunnel. A general strike is called and the men hold a big parade in New York

Now Go On With the Story

(From the German of Bernhard Kellermann—German version. Copyrighted, 1913, by S. Fischer, Verlag, Berlin. English translation and compilation by

Then one day an abrupt change came over Allan.

Denied the appetite of tremendous work, his private grief swept back upon him. A visit to Rives in the hospital did it. For two days afterward he moved around his office and did nothing. Then he suddenly announced that he was going to Europe. He sailed next morning.

For months he wandered over the continent, visiting the old haunts and old scenes and old drives that he had taken with Maud in their younger days and all the while his grief rode him like a nightmare. Occasionally a business telegram that demanded concentration for a day or two diverted him and somehow got a cheery letter from Ethel Lloyd that warmed his heart. There was no sign that the strike was breaking, so there was no need for him to hurry home, and with sorrow ever at his elbow he wandered up and down Europe.

As Chance had brought on the night mare, so Chance ended it. One day in the Spring he was in Paris and was treated by the glaring outside, which described the wonderful views of the tunnel work, he went in and took a seat. He watched for a half-hour and felt the old call stir in his blood. At first dim ahead an engineer directing the loading of a train

The engineer turned suddenly with a little smile, as of surprise, and looked full into Allan's face. It was Hartmann—Hartmann who had died at his post the night that hell broke into the tunnel. Of course, he had merely turned and looked at the moving picture machine, but to Allan it seemed as if the young man had looked at him and the surprise was due to the fact that he had wandered so far from his duty

That night he ordered a special train in order to catch a liner from Liverpool in the morning. When he stepped ashore in New York he was himself again; but before he even called at his office he hastened to Tunnel City to see how Rives was getting on. He found his friend at his house, discharged from the hospital.

It was a chilly Spring day, but Rives was sitting on the veranda in immaculate Summer attire. From the shoulders down he was the same Rives that had entered the tunnel that terrible night less than a year before. But his face was yellow and old and his hair, which had come in again, was snow-white.

AN ORDEAL

By a tremendous effort Allan concealed the terrible shock his friend's appearance gave him; but he might have spared himself the effort. Rives' eye lit up faintly when Allan darted up the steps, but he held out his hand and greeted him as if he had seen him the night before

"Back again, Mac?" His voice was faintly querulous, like an old man's. "Where have you been?"

Allan's throat was dry, but he contrived to answer with some steadiness.

"Why, I ran over to Europe for a short time. How are you feeling, old man?"

Rives had been gazing out to sea. He turned his head for an instant toward his questioner. His eyes had a pained, puzzled expression as if he were trying to remember something.

"Feel?" he echoed vaguely. And then, "Oh, I'm feeling fine. My head's better."

Allan muttered his [illegible] "I'm glad to hear it," he said heartily. Rives stared at him. Allan met his eyes steadily and [illegible] with joy that the dull, puzzled look was leaving Rives, as suddenly, got to his feet and held out his hand as if Allan had just at that moment arrived. His eyes were shining now with the same joy of welcome.

"My God, I'm glad to see you, Mac!" he cried. "Come in—come on in the house! Ah, don't!" he begged, as if he saw something in his friend's face. "I know—the doctor has told me all about it. It isn't permanent, old man. He says that I'm likely to get these little lapses from time to time for a year or so. What will you have—Scotch or rye?"

"A little Scotch—that'll do—half!" Standing by the sideboard they drank each other's health, and Allan tried to make himself forget that look in Rives' eyes. Every window was open and he shivered slightly.

"There's a terrible draught here, Jack," he remarked.

Rives looked at him with a curious smile

"I like a draught," he said slowly. Mac quickly turned his face away and shuddered. He remembered the life giving wind that had swept through the cross-gallery, where they found Rives.

The next instant he got another terrible shock

SANE AND INSANE

"How's Maud?" asked Rives, casually. "Maud!" echoed Allan—and then he saw the look again

"Yes. Was she with you in Europe?" Allan opened his mouth twice to say something and closed it again. Rives came over and quickly laid his hand on his arm

"There it goes again," he said apologetically. "I'm awfully sorry, Mac, old man. But it just sort of seems as if my memory slips a cog now and then. I'm not fit to talk to people—but you understand, don't you?"

"Yes," nodded Allan, avoiding his eyes "I understand"

"No, I don't mean that way," said Rives, gently, and Allan started under his hand. "I'm not really off my nut, Mac, but it will take some time for me to get all straightened out."

"I understand, old man—really I do." "There is something else I want to tell you, Mac." Rives went on in the same tone. "About Maud. You know she wasn't very well pleased with you toward the last."

Allan met his glance and nodded slowly. This was the same Rives

"You couldn't help it," he went on "You didn't understand her—and I did" "You did?" [illegible] Allan

"Yes—I did You see, Mac, I loved her and you never really did love her You couldn't [illegible] a woman like Maud the way she ought to be loved But I'm still your friend, Mac"

Allan was white The room was whirling around him

"But you—Maud?" he stammered.

"Yes, she knew it. She told me—that night. But I'm still your friend, Mac Maud died the next day and I'm—this! And—and—God reveals himself in many ways! Goodnight, old man."

The strike lasted all that Summer, but toward the Fall it began to show signs of breaking. Here and there men had come back to work and strike-breakers were coming in from the great wheat country to the West where the end of the harvest found many out of employment. The unions opened negotiations. The panic was over and Allan was just beginning to feel that all of his troubles were over for the time when a new and more menacing storm gathered over his head In the misery and complet financial structure of the tunnel there was a faint but ominous crackling

The Three of 'Em—Betty and Danny and Billy

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says:

HERE they are—the three of 'em. They sing through all my days. Nobody seems ever to get tired of the sentimental tale of a Man and a Girl and Love!

Sometimes I think I do—when I'm stumped for an idea and I lean my head on my hand and my brain goes round and round—yet always comes back to the three that seem to flicker behind all my days—a Betty, a Billy, and Danny.

I appeal for an idea to my mother, or the Gentle Cynic. My mother smiles and puts her brown head to one side. "Why, make a picture of a Man, a Girl—and Love!"

And she ends up triumphantly as though she had thought of something new.

And the Cynic gives me an amused look from the bachelor face of him and says, "Oh, make a picture of a Man, Love—and a Girl!" He thinks he HASN'T thought of anything new.

And they're both right. It's new and it's old. And there I go—making a picture that holds the darling three of them—Betty and Billy and Danny—whatever the idea.

Here they are—with no idea behind—just the three actors, making their little bow. She is sometimes blond, sometimes gypsy-dark. Always her mouth is full and luring. She walks with the grace of the wind in the grasses. There are always little lines that make her fairy-like on her high-instepped feet. And she is always in love.

Danny is a "wistful," warm-bodied slip of a boy—sometimes called a cherub. He has a slow and melting eye and a taking way with him. He is greedy of hearts. He is the big actor in the drama—and even when he is in only a moving picture—where he'll never hear their praise—the people clap and whistle. And if you've once had his rose-leaf, steel-strong hand around your heart, you'll remember it, I swear! He looks a jolly outlaw.

Billy is—why, he's the Man. Lots of men don't like him—but the girls all do. I wonder what that means. A blond man wondered to me, roughing up his Viking goldy mop, "Why, you make his hair forever BLACK!"

Maybe I have a tender spot for black hair because my own is blond. But that isn't the whole reason—the why of it is most practical and earthly—I make it black because I need a black spot in the picture so many times—and his head often is the only place for it.

And when the picture cries aloud for BLACK, why Billy's blond head must go.

He is the actor with the yearning eyes, the eagle nose, the tender mouth. And he follows Betty with wide arms the world around, crying, "Come to me, picture girl—lift up your lips to me!"

He's always in love, too.

It's a mutual admiration affair—"arms all 'round!"

Here they are, the three of them—the pawns that I move about in different figures day by day.

A Pugilistic Protector

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I AM engaged to be married to a gentleman some years my senior," writes Lillian May, "and a short time ago he invited me to meet his relatives, who live some distance from my home. On the trolley car a gentleman gave me a seat, while my fiance stood before me talking. It was near the entrance of the car door, and the conductor, coming along, said: 'Move up front, there,' to my escort, who paid no attention, but continued his conversation with me. The conductor, returning, and seeing his command unobeyed, gave my friend a shove with his arm, saying: 'Didn't I tell you to move up?' at which my escort, bursting with wrath, proceeded, with well-directed blows, to beat the conductor. In an instant the car was in a panic, and I alone sat calm, thinking, 'That is the man I am to marry.'

"Some days later, as I was considering whether or not to break the engagement on this account, I brought the matter to the attention of a friend who disputed with me, saying that such a man is manly and to be admired, and would protect me through life. I hold that such a man is uncouth and low and common, and I would like to know whether you would advise breaking the engagement or not."

The best husband I ever knew was a man who, on one occasion, got into a serious fight in a crowd because some one shoved him. This is not told with the intention of proving that the pugilistic man, the one who "settles a chip on his shoulder," is the one with the makings of the best husband in him. I tell it, rather, for the purpose of assuring Lillian May that this little incident is not a keynote to his character, and that if she condemns her lover, and gives him up because of this unfortunate display of temper, she may go through life unwed, or select for her companion a man so unlike her present fiance that his answer to a knockdown blow will be to brush off his clothes and beg the pardon of the one who floored him.

NO PROOF

The display of temper was unfortunate and ill-advised, but it does not prove that the man is "unsooth, low and common." There is some justification for his behavior, and every man who has been addressed by a street car employe as if he were one of a number of dumb cattle, being prodded and driven into a pen, will be quick to see it.

The conductor's intentions were within his rights. His manner wasn't. That man resented it. We all resent such treatment every hour of the day, but remain silent. It is part of the price we pay for the privilege of living in a large city where we are crowded and pushed and shoved till all dignity and individuality are crowded and shoved out of us.

"As a man thinketh, so he is," and this makes a pugilist of every man, and the lounging occasionally to be one, of every woman, for every self-respecting man and woman, with a backbone and a regard for his or her rights, as well as for the rights of others, occasionally longs to take a punch at some one whose manner is insulting, or who digs with a sharp elbow, or jabs with an umbrella.

Self-respect has saved the skin of many an offender, and, unfortunately, his skin is saved so often by those who refuse to be mixed up in a brawl that he grows more and more offensive, and does not know when he has passed the dividing line between his rights and the rights of others until some quick-tempered individual like Lillian May's lover shows him.

We are all so many children with our text books before us. The conductor needs to learn that a gracious manner will do more than one that is offensive, and that firmness is not the twin of rudeness.

LIMITATIONS

The quick-tempered lover has neglected the lesson on self-control. The blow is a poor argument. The man who pushes his way through life with his fists never gets very far with his brains.

And even Lillian May, a shy, dignified little maid, with a commendable shrinking from publicity, is among those who, having left their school days behind them, are taking to the painful school of experience a post-graduate course.

She is too quick to condemn; too harsh to a man whose saving grace is his love for her; she is too uncharitable. She has yet to learn that the way to make a man better is to think he is better than he is. No man was ever made truthful by being called a thief.

To tell this man he is "low, uncouth and common" will lose Lillian May a lover and make him what she describes him.

I hope she will tell him that she doesn't like his display of temper. He needs a reprimand, but he is not guilty of a crime.

If the messenger of love has a saucy, independent manner and is quick to take offence and resent it, it should be remembered in his favor that the impetuous heart is often the warmest. Quick to fight for himself, he would be quicker to protect the woman he loves.

There is a dividing line between ruffianism and chivalry, and Time, which so soon cools the blood, will teach him.

Heard on the Pier

Johnnie—Awful sad, Charlie dying suddenly like that, don't you know, wasn't it? What was the cause of it, old man?

Algy—Well, his Summer holiday came round, you know, and—

"Well?"

"He wore a new shirt, and—"

"Of course."

"He got hot—"

"Naturally."

"Well, that made the shirt shrink, and"—Algy shrugged his shoulders—"to cut a long story short, it choked him to death!"

Perhaps

"I ran across an old friend of yours today," remarked the chauffeur.

"Will he recover?" asked the baroness.

How I Really Cured My GREY HAIR

I Will Tell You Free How To Cure Yours by a Simple, Sure, Harmless, Home Treatment. Age No Obstacle.

Don't Use Harmful Dyes that make Your Hair Look like a Painted Mop.

LET ME HELP YOU FREE.

I AM A WOMAN who belongs to a prematurely grey-haired family. My father was grey before he was 30, and I, myself, had a few grey hairs before the age of 20. I developed grey hairs, which became quite unbecoming to my personality, and also in business. I LOST THREE GOOD POSITIONS for no other reason than my fading hair. The gruesome torment with stunning remarks I received from my friends. I, A WOMAN OF 45, the LAST to be SCHOOL-GIRL thinking of being one of the many Grey Hair Sufferers that are extended-ly advertised, when I certainly mustn't be suffering from a scientific and clever student of the Character of the Hair. He strongly advised me to have nothing whatever to do with dyes, bleaches, tonics, etc., but to adopt a SCIENTIFIC TREATMENT FOR THE HAIR, and in the most delightful time rarely deceived even the closest observer. By method by certain chemical action on the pigmentary cells starting cells restored the hair to its natural colour. In many cases the surprise to me was that the method was not only successful, but it GAVE THE HAIR A STRONGER AND BEAUTIFUL GROWTH OF HAIR. My friend wrote out his prescription, which I had made up, and after following the instructions for a few days, I was surprised and delighted to find my hair becoming restored to its natural colour. The colouring process continued until after some few weeks my hair actually once again resumed the natural shade of my youthful days. Since then I HAVE BEEN INUNDATED WITH ENQUIRIES for this blend, and as a woman unknown to me, who came to hear of this wonderful preparation, I feel it my duty to make public the REMEDY BY WHICH I OBTAINED MY ORDINARY MERIT, which is quite harmless. I will send full details free to any man or woman who finds Grey Hair to be the same especially if it was to my own. Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE OVERDOES IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of seventeen, and in love with a young man three months my senior. He goes to business with me every morning and seems very affectionate, but when I meet him on the street, and he is with other young men, with whom I also am acquainted, he barely notices me. What would you do in a case like this? I love him dearly. M. A.

I AM sure he does not want his friends to know of the attachment, and in an effort to conceal his feelings, he swings to the other extreme.

You are only seventeen, and will love many men in time. Then you will be glad no one knew of this. Treat him accordingly as he treats you.

DON'T TAKE EITHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and have two boy friends who are very much in love with me. One is eight months younger than I and the other is four years older. My parents are very much opposed to my marriage with the former, as his family connections are not what could be called good. The other boy has a very good reputation, he owns a lot for me, but I do not care for it as much for him. My parents think everything of him. But he does not appeal to me.

PERPLEXED.

YOUR parents object to one suitor and you don't love the other. Good reasons why you should not take either. With a while and perhaps time will make your way clear for you. But under no conditions should you marry a man you do not love. Always remember that.

Climate Failed; Medicine Effective

Rest, fresh air and well-cooked, nourishing food do help many persons suffering with Lung Trouble. But in many cases the disease is only temporarily "arrested," and something more is needed. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for Throat and Lung Troubles and has brought about many complete recoveries—in many cases where the surroundings were not ideal. Judging by the many reports of recoveries received, we believe it should be used in every case of Lung Trouble. A remarkable case follows:

Weldon, Ill.

"My Dear Sir: Through your instrumentality I have been saved from a premature grave. On December 15, 1909, I was taken with Typhoid Pneumonia, which developed into Consumption. In February, 1910, I went to Fort Worth, Texas, and later to Canon City, Colorado, remaining there for a few days. I was surprised and delighted to find my hair becoming restored to its natural color. The coloring process continued until after some few weeks my hair actually once again resumed the natural shade of my youthful days. Since then I HAVE BEEN INUNDATED WITH ENQUIRIES for this blend, and as a person unknown to me, who came to hear of this wonderful preparation, I feel it my duty to make public the REMEDY BY WHICH I OBTAINED MY ORDINARY MERIT, which is quite harmless. I will send full details free to any man or woman who finds Grey Hair to be the same especially if it was to my own. The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I WAS reading a awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair, and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties.

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either. He was nearly as black as Sam Langford."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Ix. It is a jerky sort of a name, Ix, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I, O, X.

"Well, this Ix is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Ila, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Ix to get Ila because the Ix has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gelt belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Ila that she cannot marry Ix, she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when they passed beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Ix is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Ix's bride.'

"'But Ix I like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe to a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe is nothing.'

"The way the story ends, he makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Ila until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Bostonian passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barber. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MODERN MEANINGS

This story comes from Birmingham, England. At a certain school in that town, we are told, the mistress, feeling well disposed towards one of the one of last Summer's very rare hot afternoons, sent one of her pupils to buy a pound of plums from a fruit vendor who was shouting his wares outside.

"And be sure, Jessie," she remarked, as she handed a dime to the little girl, "to pinch one or two of the plums before buying any to see if they are ripe."

Presently Nellie returned to the classroom, her face wreathed in smiles, and presented the mistress not only with a large bag of plums, but also with the dime.

For some time she could do nothing but gurgle incoherently. Then, more or less recovering her composure:

"Instead of pinching only one or two as you suggested," she laughed, "I waited until the man wasn't looking and pinched a whole bagful!"

"There's a Reason"

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks had some strength this morning, but markets were not very active. The near approach of holidays was one of the deterrents to commitments. Reports from Mexico were regarded as reassuring. After it had been reported that Mr. Lind had been ordered home, it was stated by Secretary of Bryan that reports from Mexico were very encouraging, and that the envoy would return to Mexico City.

Boston & Maine gained ¼ on the sale of one share in the Boston market, and New Haven rose 1¾, while United Fruit made a small gain. Minor rails higher, but were very dull. There was a big rise in warrant quotations in the London market, but it had no effect upon trading in copper shares here.

When the morning was half over the New York market was strong and a number of issues had advanced considerably. Amalgamated was up ½, Reading 1¼, American Smelting 1¾, Steel 1⅛, Utah Copper 1½, New Haven 1⅝, and American Can 1¼. Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul and several other important issues had made fractional gains.

New York Opened Stronger.

A newspaper report that the Mexican government would accept President Wilson's proposal inspired a strong feeling among stock traders and the market was bullish at the opening. Later word came from Washington that nothing had been heard at the White House to confirm the story and that Envoy Lind had been ordered to leave Vera Cruz for Washington.

But earlier reports had led up to an upturn in which American Smelting, which has great interests in Mexico, was prominent. It advanced 1¾. Amalgamated rose ⅝, Chino ¼ and coppers were strong as a group.

There was profit taking at the end of a half hour and some active stocks shaded. Among early advances had been Steel common ⅛, Union Pacific ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅛, Pennsylvania ⅛, Northern Pacific ⅛, New Haven ¼, New York Central ¼, Missouri Pacific ¼, Amalgamated ¼, Nashville ¼, Erie ⅛, St. Paul ⅛, American Can ¼, and Canadian Pacific ⅛. Norfolk & Western, American Locomotive and Baltimore & Ohio shaded.

The curb was firm.

Americans in London were strong above New York parity, but traders in the Americas was restricted because of the situation in Mexico. The Bank of England statement was very favorable, but its minimum rate of discount remained unchanged.

American Interests in Mexico.

American investments in Mexico amount to hundreds of millions of dollars and most Americans who are in that country are there to protect them as far as is possible. What will happen to American property if all its guardians obey President Wilson's warning and abandon them is, of course, a matter of conjecture. There is no great deal of hatred on the part of Mexicans towards Americans and they will not be good custodians of what is valued in their country by citizens of this one. They remember the Alamo in a different sense that Texans, and have not forgotten that California was once their territory and that Lieutenant Zebulon Pike was invading Mexico when he visited Pike's Peak.

Great Britain has a way of protecting its subjects everywhere in the world, and does not observe any diplomatic niceties when British property or lives are in danger. It also has big interests in Mexico and is not satisfied with conditions there, but under the Monroe Doctrine cannot interfere. But for all that Mexicans will hesitate about committing any outrages upon British subjects and property. It is only American who are to be offered up as "goats" upon the sacrificial altar. The first war in which this country engaged with Mexico was as popular a proceeding as is recorded in the history of the Democratic party. It provided the country with a Democratic President in the person of General Zachary Taylor, known to his army as "Rough and Ready." The foreign policy of the Wilson administration is different than that of the Polk administration, which was also Democratic.

Objects to Bankers' Profits.

A good deal of objection to allowing bankers much profit has been disclosed in the caucus of Democrats on the currency bill, and the latest thing in that line was an argument by Representative Harrison of Mississippi, to reduce the profits of banking to customers customers a special charge for collecting on out-of-town drafts, checks and commercial paper. He had come to the conclusion that the banking business was the only legitimate profits attending the same.

"Recognizing this right in the bankers, the government," said Mr. Glass, "retained the right only to control the issue of its money."

Author of a "Grandfather Act."

Mr. Harrison is a genial gentleman and distinctly related to the late President Benjamin Harrison. He is the author of the "Grandfather" clause in the Constitution of Mississippi. It is intended to limit suffrage so far as negroes are concerned. Once when the writer was in his law office in Columbus, that State, this clause came under discussion. "I don't claim much credit for it," said Senator Harrison, who was then presiding officer of the Mississippi Senate, "as I borrowed it from Massachusetts. I went to congress with it in Massachusetts articles. He opened Massachusetts statutes to a clause relating to education requirements for voters and he pointed to the Mississippi adaptation. They were almost word for word alike.

"To have a profound respect for Massachusetts' said Mr. Harrison, and I know where to go for a thing."

Wants Senator Gallinger to Retire.

In arguing in favor of taxing very rich men more upon their incomes, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin classed Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire in the class which does not want a big income at all. And he was personal in his remarks. He said that the sooner Mr. Gallinger retired from the Senate the better it would be.

"The Senator from New Hampshire may retire voluntarily," replied Mr. Gallinger, "and if he does I do not fancy the Senator from Wisconsin will be grieved."

"Since the Senator puts that to me in the form of a question I shall answer him frankly that the Senator from Wisconsin will feel no grief whatever!" retorted Mr. La Follette.

"Ner shall I!" retorted Mr. Gallinger.

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market opened strong. Spot was up 12s. 6d. and futures 11s. 3d.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged today at 4½ per cent. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities this week is 50.59 per cent. against 58.60 last week and compares with a decline from 49¾ per cent. to 49¼ per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

Financial authorities estimate subscriptions for the $58,000,000 Southern Pacific certificates of interest being offered by the Union Pacific will amount to about 75 per cent. of the total, leaving only 25 per cent. for the underwriters.

President George J. Whelan of the United Cigars Stores Company is here from Europe and says that the profits of his corporation last year were $2,400,000 greater than those of the previous one. "The United States," he said, "is the great financial barometer of the world, and all Europe watches us."

Business is booming in Germany, although the stock market there is depressed. Shipping, iron, coal and steel industries are remarkably prosperous. During the first half of last year exports were $184,800,000, while imports gained $20,400,000 greater than those of the previous one. Is Gardner a $100,000 Beauty? Ask Foss

Congressman Gardner—take it from the political dopesters—is like the man who went swimming and the dog got his clothes.

How's that, you ask, breathlessly—

Why, he wouldn't have had a chance in the world if it weren't for his barrel.

The story—with acknowledgments to the dopesters above—is that Gardner sent Governor Foss an affirmation—delivered by messenger—that he was highly pleased—but to this effect:

"If you go into this fight, it'll cost you $100,000."

Thereupon, the table runs, the Governor decided to drop out and keep his $100,000.

It's a large sum to discuss—$100,000. We hate to say what some people would or would not do for one-tenth that sum. Nevertheless, we always did distrust these dopesters.

Herewith is presented the richest bit of reparte on record for the present campaign.

Someone asked Martin Lomasney if he was a candidate for re-election. Marty said, no, he supposed so. Isn't it a busy day? Then the questioner persisted, "Who's running against you?" and the Czar of Ward 8 replied that he supposed someone was, but really, he hadn't heard of it.

Aside from that, it's a hot fight in Ward 8.

Speaking of Lomasney—how about Brother Joe? Brother Joe has a perfectly good appointment in the Street Department in his pocket. All it needs is a little civil service O. K. Mr. Civil Service Commissioner Fitzgerald frowned on Brother Joe heretofore. It is possible that his extensive knowledge of real estate values may cause them to change their minds this time.

Dr. Frederick P. Glazier of Hudson, a Progressive candidate for Senator against Senator Charles F. McGlenn of Marlboro, says he's going to win, and Mr. Cook says he found the North Pole, and Archbold says he didn't write those certificates of deposit, and Ananias and Baron Munchhausen made a few prospects in their day.

Our idea of an easy job is to manage Senator McCarty's re-entry into the Senate. He was one man who towered above the rank and file of that body at the last session as a worker for the right bills and for his constituents.

Under cover of the smoke of heavy firing in the battle for the Governorship, the Democrats are hoping to win a majority in the Senate next year. The two Republican Senators whose supporters are wobbly are Senator Hilton, who emasculated one excellent pure food measure, and Senator Julius Garst, who was elected by an eyelash at the last election.

John H. Buckley is threatening to run John A. Buckley for infringement of his trademark. Or, if John H. is on for re-election, John A.—an enrolled Republican—has been entered in the primary race to beat John H.

Pointing wrathfully to the similarity of their names, John H. says, "The purpose of putting him up against me is apparent."

Speaking of Buckley reminds us that John J. McDevitt, Quincy's representative in the Senate, is running for re-election and vindication, and breathing out threatings and slaughter about bribery and forgery and such little tricks.

George M. Harlow "than whom," Governor Foss has once heard to remark, "there is none such"—is slated for the Licensing Board. But the Governor disappointed anxious inquirers by neglecting to send in the appointment yesterday.

Harlow has trailed along with the Governor through each of the latter's successful campaigns. The Governor is only doing turn about if he gives Harlow a plum while he has the chance.

Senator Timilty, who boasts that he never voted to sustain one of Governor Foss' vetoes, voted in favor of the Westbrook-Tenney and the Washburn bills as a result of his habit, but his New Haven collar doesn't fit, and he's claiming he never meant to put it on. 2527927.

Somebody named Creamer says Governor Foss is a "false prophet now happily Foss-phorescent with the signs of political decay," but it took him six months to think it up. He's been planning it ever since the Governor didn't give him an appointment quick.

"I get what I go after," says Foss, and Walsh-Benton-Gardner-Bird immediately advertised for a new supply of nerve.

No Currency Act Without Public Control

A. Barton Hepburn, president of the New York Clearing House, showed great prudence and sagacity in his advice to the bankers' convention at Chicago last week.

The convention of leading financiers from all parts of the country was on the point of "bolting" from the currency bill now before Congress, denouncing it, voting it into the scrap heap, resolving that they would have none of it, and sending a polite but severe reprimand to Congress for attempting to legislate at this session on a subject it knows so little about.

The convention was incited to this undiplomatic, not to say unpatriotic, course by an eminent banker, James B. Forgan of Chicago, whose advice is usually sound. In this case it was entirely unsound.

The better counsel of Mr. Hepburn prevailed, and he was ably seconded in the convention by two younger men who are in the very front rank of American finance, George B. Reynolds of Chicago and Joseph T. Talbert of New York.

The bankers finally adopted resolutions recognizing the necessity for currency reform, mildly praising the evident desire of Congress "to give a wise law to the country," and promising the co-operation of the bankers to that end.

That was the right spirit. The bankers then proceeded to formulate their chief objections to the pending bill, fifteen in number.

Very few people know enough about technical details of banking to be dogmatic about them, and we shall not discuss details, which should be left to experts, who are more numerous in banks than in Congress or newspaper offices.

But there are two great principles in the pending bill in which every one should be interested, because they touch the property and prosperity if not the savings of every citizen.

First, the control of the Federal Reserve Board, which is to have general supervision over the national banks and the currency system. The bill now in Congress creates a board exclusively of Government officials, seven in number.

The bankers at first requested that a MAJORITY of this board should be elected by the bankers; that the power to provide, regulate and lend not only private funds—essentially the business of the banker—but the Government's own funds as well should be vested in associated bankers.

This object was abandoned because it was impossible of attainment, and the bankers now request that the Federal Reserve Board shall be composed of three governors appointed by the President three elected by the banks, and a seventh member, the Secretary of the Treasury, who is usually in very close touch with bankers.

The other great issue is whether the 25,000 banks in the country shall be divided into FIVE groups, each group to have its own Federal reserve bank for reserve deposits, exchanges and re-discounts of member banks in its own region, or into twelve such groups. The Government bill provides twelve, and some urge fifteen, such federal reserve banks, or reserve associations.

Under the existing bank act there are only three so-called central reserve cities. These are New York, Chicago and St. Louis. The bankers' convention wanted ONE central reserve association for the whole country, with as many branches as experience required, ALL CONTROLLED BY A CENTRAL BANK BOARD. The bankers' convention also advised that "emergency currency," or Federal reserve notes, should be issued by the various Federal reserve banks, protected by a 40 per cent. gold reserve, and not by the Government for the United States Treasury as at present.

The foregoing are the two great points of difference between the banks and Congress. The authors of the new currency law have to overcome in Congress the impenetrable ignorance of many Congressmen on this subject.

Many representatives think that a new currency act can and should decentralize the money stores of the New York banks and scatter them evenly over the country. They forget that money always goes where its owner wants it to go. It goes in the long run where it can be most easily and profitably used. Why most of the bank reserves of the country now pile up—not in a few cities, BUT IN A VERY FEW BANKS—may be discussed in another article.

As to the great questions at issue between the banks and Congress: "Shall the Government or the banks control the Federal Reserve Board, and shall the Government or the banks issue emergency currency when necessary?" we are certain that no currency act CAN PASS EITHER THIS OR ANY CONGRESS IN THE NEAR FUTURE THAT DOES NOT VEST THE CONTROL AND SUPERVISION OF THE OPERATIONS OF THE BANKS AS A WHOLE IN A GOVERNMENT BOARD. Subject to that supervision and control in the public interest, the business of banking should be left to the bankers.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

FROM MEXICO AND "SICK AT HEART"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your articles about the situation in Mexico appeal to one who lives near the border line.

Last Winter a through and through American said to me: "I have just come from Mexico and am sick at heart. I do not like to see my people driven about like cattle."

Two men owned saloons close together in a Mexican town; both were wrecked and looted. One was owned by an American, the other by an English subject. The American had not, when I heard the story, been reimbursed for his loss, that was several months after it was wrecked. The subject of King George communicated with the authorities and suggested that it would be wise for them to pay the damage. The man was paid in full. What is the reason? Cannot our land make our flag an emblem of power?

One hundred Americans have lost their lives in the recent Mexican civil war; how many more must be sacrificed?

MR. HEARST'S MESSAGE ON HOME RULE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Mr. Hearst's "Message to Irish-Americans" in the Sunday AMERICAN will be read by hundreds of thousands of Irishmen in this country, as well as by nine-tenths of the people in the dear old land over the sea, and their sincere gratitude will be offered for the great and encouraging help he has given them in their long fight for their own. It is not the first time that Irishmen have reason to be grateful to Mr. Hearst and the AMERICAN for the sympathy they have received in behalf of their country. The history of Mr. Hearst's papers will be always associated with justice and fair play in international matters, and Mr. Hearst's latest message of hope and defiance against oppression, in which he says "If I were an Irishman I would take pride in the fight for Home Rule" will be re-echoed in Great Britain with good effect.

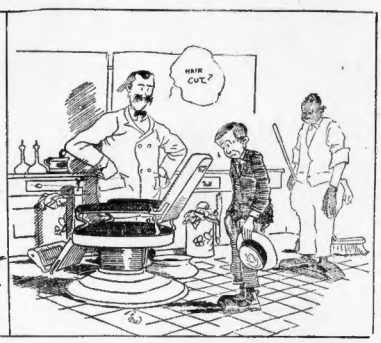
Buried Treasure

His First Shave



One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Chapter XXI.

MRS. DANFORTH turned as Mary entered the kitchen, then started in surprise when she saw that the girl still wore her hat and jacket.

"My dear," she exclaimed, "I thought you were getting ready for supper?"

"Mother," said Mary, hurriedly, "I happen to remember a telegram I have to send, just a little matter of business about which I cannot tell you just now. I must run around to the telegraph office before supper. I will be back in a quarter of an hour."

She paused long enough to put her arms about her mother and to kiss her with a tenderness that was almost passionate. And, at the demonstration of affection, the older woman's wounded feelings were healed.

As Mary hurried toward Columbus avenue she felt in her handbag for a card that Bert Fletcher had given her, a card bearing his name and address, in handing it to her, he had explained awkwardly, "If you should care to see me at any time, you can send me word there, where I live with my mother. Anything sent there gets me."

By the time the girl had reached the telegraph office she knew by heart the address on the bit of pasteboard. Seizing a telegraph blank and a pen, she wrote quickly as if fearful that her resolution would fail, the name of Herbert Fletcher, with the street and number of his home. Then, without faltering, she penned her ten-word message.

"Have changed mind. Home tonight if you care to call."

Signing her initials, she handed the slip to the waiting clerk, gave him the money for the message, and added:

"See that this gets off at once, please."

The clerk grinned. It was evident that he considered this a pretty girl sending a summons to an admirer.

"Oh, yes, Miss," he began pertly. "Don't worry, I'll"——

He stopped abruptly as he met Mary's stern and surprised gaze, and had the grace to mutter, "Excuse me!" flushing to the roots of his red hair.

Mary had forgotten the incident and her own displeasure by the time she turned again into Eighty-fourth street, and walked westward. The glow that, such a short time before, had seemed prophetic to her happy heart, had died entirely from the western sky, and in its place was a bank of fog rising slowly from the river.

"The whole world has changed once more," she muttered, wretchedly. "If it were not for mother, I would like to die! But she needs me, I almost wish she didn't."

Yet when she opened the door of the Danforth apartment, she forced herself to call out cheerily:

"Here I am, mother, dear! As soon as I can make myself presentable I will come out to supper. Forgive me for keeping you waiting."

At the bright tone the mother, vaguely uneasy by her daughter's recent reticence, breathed a sigh of relief. After all, things must be all right or Mary would not seem so like herself again. Girls were queer creatures, anyhow, with their varying moods, and Mary had been a different girl since her father's death. Which thought made the elderly woman sigh again.

As the two women sat over their simple evening meal, the daughter chatted lightly, pleasantly. She tried to remember the little gossip of the office and several mild jokes that Mr. Pearson had told her today when he happened to stop at her desk for a few minutes' chat. The girl laughed more heartily in telling these than her mother thought natural. At last the widow asked a question that had trembled on her lips when Mary had come out to supper, but which she had checked, moved to do this by an impulse which she did not understand.

"Dearie," she said timidly, "are you feeling badly tonight, or are you worried?"

Mary shook her head. "Only tired, mother dear," she replied. "You know at this time of year the work seems hard."

The mother looked distressed and breathed her customary sigh. At the sound Mary felt vaguely annoyed. Her mother sighed most of the time nowadays, she reflected. It was getting to be a confirmed habit.

"What is the matter, mother?" she asked, trying to speak gently.

"I was only thinking," said the widow, "that I wish you did not have to work so hard."

"So do I," returned the daughter. "Let's hope I won't have to much longer."

The mother looked at her hopefully and inquiringly. "Do you mean that, Mary?" she asked eagerly. "Do you mean that there's a chance that soon you can stop all this toil, and that all we've hoped for will happen?"

Her voice broke and the tears came to her eyes.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "if so, thank heaven! Thank heaven! It has driven me wild to see you so tired, dear, and I am so lonely, and I have hoped that you had had news from Gordon, but I didn't like to ask about him so often. Do you mean now that he"——

Mary had risen to her feet and stood pale, but calm, gazing at her mother. Her expression caused the older woman to catch her breath sharply.

"Why—Mary—what is the matter?" she asked tremulously. Don't look like that! You frighten me!"

"There is nothing to be frightened about, dear," the daughter said slowly, "only I would rather that you did not talk to me again about Gordon Craig. For I shall never marry him."

Although the widow burst into hysterical sobs, the girl's calmness did not desert her, nor did her voice quaver when, after having soothed the agitated woman, she gave the brief explanation:

"It is all for the best, mother. Gordon and I do not love each other any longer. And I would not marry him if he were the only man in the world!"

Chances for Boys. The Life of Booker Washington Proves All Who Wish to Can Succeed. Work the Secret.

Written for Boston American by

DR. C. H. PARKHURST

IF the boys that read the AMERICAN could have listened to an address delivered by Booker T. Washington recently, they would have gotten a stirring in their inward parts that would have given them a start and kept them on the run all the rest of their life.

That magnificent negro, the admired of whites and blacks, gave the story of his life, dwelling particularly on the first move which he made while still a lad, and which led on to his becoming the man that he is and to the great work all the world knows so much about.

While working one day in a coal mine, far under ground, he overheard two men talking about a school that had been established somewhere in Virginia where boys could attend without having to pay. He said to himself, "That is the place for me."

The school was at Hampton, 500 miles away. He had no money, but that did not discourage him; neither did the fact that he would have to walk in order to get there. He put himself on the road and by the aid of an occasional lift that some wagon driver gave him or a ride that he stole on the cars, he arrived in course of time at Hampton.

Work Was His College Entrance Examination

In his soiled and bedraggled condition he at once presented himself at the schoolhouse where boys were being examined for admission. The teacher eyed him curiously and asked him what he wanted. Although thinking that it was perfectly evident what he wanted, he respectfully replied that he wanted to go to school.

Without a word of explanation the teacher gave him a broom and told him to go into the next room and sweep the floor. He took the broom and swept the floor three times and dusted the room four times till there was no more dust to be had.

When the job was finished the teacher came in and with her handkerchief rubbed off the table and the chairs, then pried into the corners in pursuit of some cranny into which Booker's duster had not penetrated. The search proving unsuccessful she turned on the boy and simply said, "You will do."

"That," said Mr. Washington, "was my examination for Hampton Institute, the best college examination that I ever passed."

Now any young fellow who has any stuff in him and any ambition to be something more than a mere commonplace, of no particular use to himself or to anybody else, ought to learn something from this story of the way in which young Booker started in to make a man of himself.

Thousands of boys today are complaining that they have no chance. The trouble is that instead of making a chance for themselves they wait to have some one make it for them. They want to be dressed and babied, wheeled in a baby carriage instead of using their own legs and feet.

How many of the white boys that read this article care enough about going to school to be willing to foot it 500 miles, for the sake of the opportunity? How many would sleep under a board sidewalk, as young Washington did, because having no money to pay for a bed?

There Is a Chance for Any Boy Who Really Wants One

How many have spirit and independent ambition to pass Booker's style of examination, and thus prove the sincerity of their purpose? There is a chance for boys that will make a chance. If you get left it is because you have not spirit enough to keep up. While Booker used difficulties as means of victory, the average white boy uses difficulties as cause of defeat. Obstacles stimulated Booker; most boys are frightened by them and fail, not because they are fools but because they are cowards.
